Judge issues restraining order against city

Suit temporarily halts sewer project

By PHIL LEWIS
Record-Herald City Editor

Fayette County Common Pleas Court Judge Evelyn Coffman has issued a temporary restraining order preventing the city of Washington C.H. from proceeding with construction plans for the multi-million dollar city sewer project.

The restraining order was issued after a Lima construction firm filed a law suit in Fayette County Common Pleas Court protesting the city's intention of awarding construction contracts to a Columbus firm.

A hearing has been set for Tuesday at 1 p.m. in the Fayette County Courthouse to review the case. The restraining order will be in effect until Dec. 20.

The law suit, which is asking for no monetary damages, was prompted by a Washington C.H. City Council decision to award $10.5 million in sewer line installation contracts to the Complete General Construction Co. of Columbus.

The Lima firm, Williams Excavating Co., contends that it submitted the low bids on two of the contracts. The city's failure to accept the Lima firm's bids will cost the firm nearly $5 million in construction work.

The city opened bids on the project Oct. 26. At that time, it appeared Williams Excavating Co. was the low bidder on two of the six contracts and the Complete General Construction Co. was the low bidder on the remaining four contracts.

However, the bids had not been tabulated by the city's consulting engineering firm of C.F. Bird and R.J. Bull, Ltd. When the engineers tabulated the bids, they found a $2,500 error in the Columbus firm's total bid on all six contracts making the firm the low bidder on all six contracts.

Despite protests from an attorney for the Williams Excavating Co., the City Council introduced an ordinance Nov. 9 awarding all six contracts to the Columbus firm. Two weeks later the ordinance was passed into law.

However, the contracts have not yet been signed.

City Manager George H. Shapter reported Wednesday that the Environmental Protection Agency had to review and endorse the bids before contracts could be signed. He said he received EPA endorsement Wednesday, but the court order temporarily prevents the signing of the contracts.

The Williams Excavating Co. contends the city's intention of awarding all six contracts to the Columbus firm constitutes an abuse of official power. It further states that the city's action is contrary to state law requiring that contracts go to the lowest and best bidder.

However, Gary Smith, the city's law director, stated at a Council session that the city did not have to award bids to the lowest bidder.

The law suit also stated that the city's denial of contracts to the Lima firm constitutes a denial of valuable property rights incapable of being measured by damages. Thus, no monetary damages were requested in the suit.

Instead, the law suit is asking the court to direct the city to award two of the six contracts to the Lima firm.

If that is not possible, the law suit is asking the court to set aside all bids and direct the city to review bids as submitted without modifications, or direct the city to reject all bids and readvertise the contracts.

The law suit shouldn't come as a surprise to city officials.

When Council reviewed the final bid tabulations from the engineering firm, city law director Smith warned a law suit was probable. Smith said regardless of how the city awards the contracts one of the two firms involved would suffer the loss of $5 million in construction work, and legal action could result.

Case still not closed

Two questions linger in Kennedy's slaying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI has opened its files on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy but this has so far not closed the case on two 14-year-old questions:

Did Lee Harvey Oswald murder the president on his own? And if so, why?

A preliminary reading of the files, released Wednesday, does not refute the Warren Commission conclusion that Oswald acted independently.

They show that:

— Within two hours of the president's death, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover believed the crime was committed by Oswald, whom he called "a mean-minded individual ... in the category of a nut."

— Almost as quickly, bureau agents began a hunt of unprecedented magnitude, running down thousands of leads ranging from reports of a Castro-inspired plot to threatening graffiti on lavatory walls.

Hoover presided over the investigation, urging speed yet thoroughness by his agents. At the same time he worked to preserve his bureau's image by pressuring "our many friends" in the news media.

The half-ton of files give a vivid portrait of a nation suddenly gone mad. Hundreds - thousands - of Americans said they had seen or talked with Oswald in almost every part of the country.

A woman in Akron, Ohio, said she had asked Oswald to dance with her in a local gin mill shortly before the assassination. Oswald refused and just sat in a chair and cried. So she danced with a "Mr. Ruby" instead.

Others said they had seen Oswald and Jack Ruby, the Dallas nightclub owner who shot him dead Nov. 24, 1963, together in many places.

An Atlanta telephone operator reported placing long distance phone calls to Oswald and then Ruby in Dallas early that November. Phone company records showed no such calls.

Agents doggedly ran down all such leads. All too often they ended in a blind — not infrequently, a blind drunk — alley.

More serious paths led toward Fidel Castro, Communist leader of Cuba. The FBI obtained a letter from Havana to Oswald mentioning money payments and Oswald's ability to shoot out a candle at 50 meters.

The letter was dated Nov. 10, 1963, but was postmarked six days after the assassination. The FBI decided it was the work of a crank. But Hoover wrote at the time "as to whether he Oswald was the only man gives me great concern."

Other reports of Cuban involvement also gave Hoover pause. Among them, the fact that Oswald had been arrested in New Orleans for distributing pro-Castro literature; a Castro speech before Kennedy's assassination vowing retaliation against U.S. leaders if Castro were harmed; and a Spanish diplomat's report that his country's intelligence service had established a link between Castro, Oswald and the murder of the American president.

The files disclose no major discrepancies with the Warren Commission report, which drew extensively from them. But they contain harrowing vignettes.

Contributes to inflation

Wholesale prices show slight jump

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose 0.7 percent in November as the cost of food continued to climb at a rapid rate, the Labor Department said today.

The wholesale price increase was smaller than the 0.8 percent gain in October, but it was still enough to contribute substantially to inflation.

Farm products rose 3 percent in cost for the month after a 2.4 percent rise in October and five months of declines before that.

The prices of industrial commodities rose 0.4 percent, compared with a 0.6 percent increase the month before, indicating that food prices have been the main cause of the two-month jump in wholesale prices.

Prices paid to wholesalers usually show up later at retail stores and are considered an early warning of inflation trends. Most of the food price increases had not been reflected at supermarkets in the latest consumer price report for October.

Wholesale price increases usually take a few months to show up in the Consumer Price Index, which measures the nation's inflation rate. That index went up a moderate 0.3 percent in each of the last three months.

The Labor Department said the price of finished goods, which may be a more accurate indicator than the Wholesale Price Index, rose 0.4 percent, half the 0.8 percent increase the month before. This index does not duplicate price changes as they move through all stages of processing.

Detailed plans presented by state officials

Proposed changes in U.S. 35 relocation reviewed at hearing

By PHIL LEWIS
Record-Herald City Editor

Local, state, and federal governments say they strive for public input, and that contention was backed up Wednesday night during a public hearing on relocation plans for U.S. 35 through Fayette County.

During the hearing, held in the Mahan Building and conducted by the Ohio Department of Transportation, changes in plans to relocate U.S. 35 were presented. Those changes were made in response to input from citizens and local officials given at a previous public hearing on the project.

Detailed plans of where the proposed dual highway will cut through the county and how that will affect property owners was presented at Wednesday's meeting. Over 30 area residents were in attendance.

However, state officials pointed out that the plans presented were not the final design plans. Further input will be solicited from area residents.

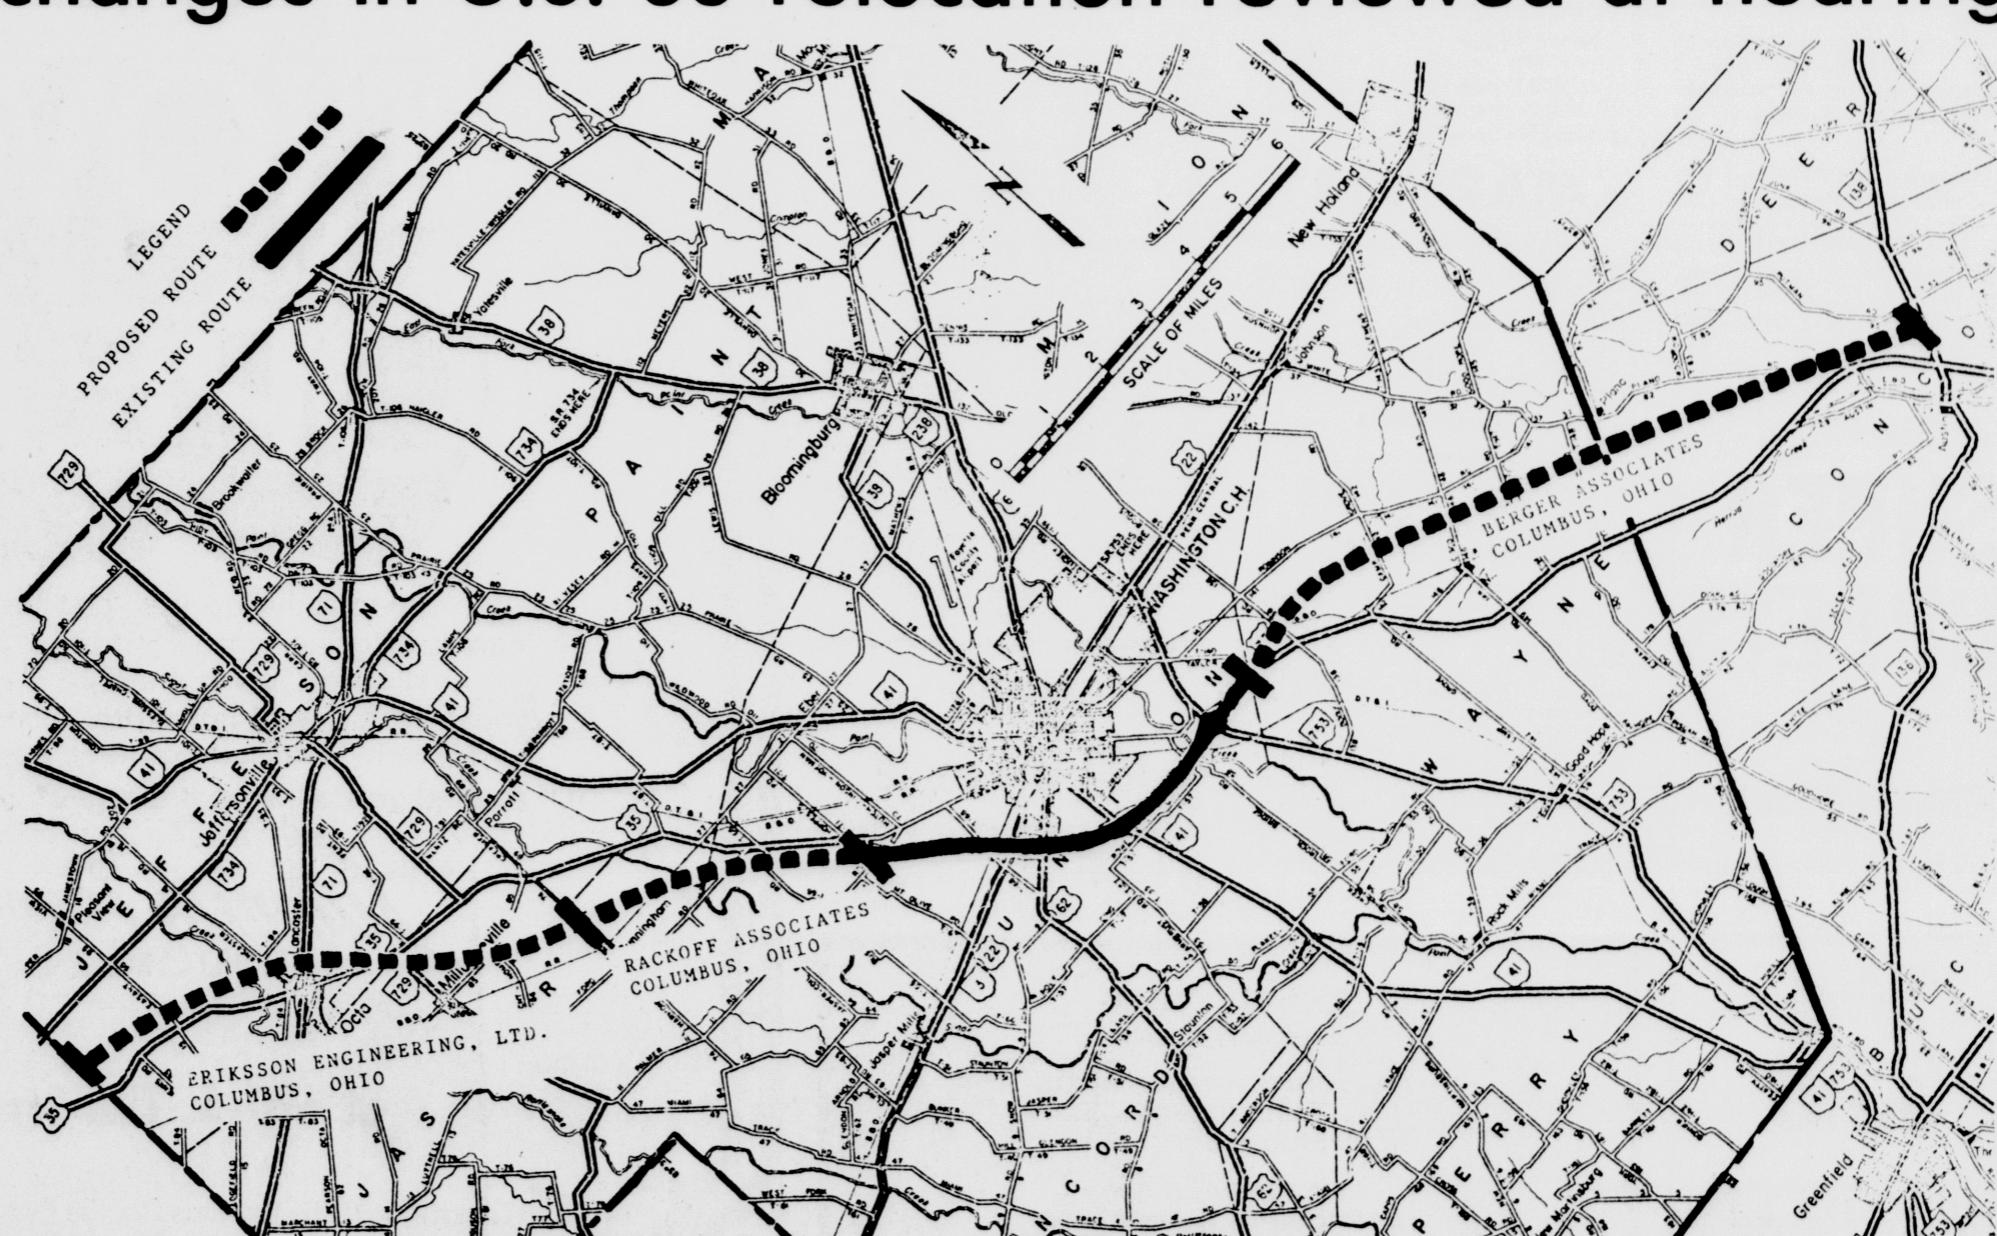

The public hearing kicked off a five-year design program. No construction is planned during the five-year program which runs through 1982, so it will be a while before actual work on the highway begins.

Once the interstate highway is completed, Ohio motorists will be able to drive from Dayton to Gallipolis on divided highway. The last leg of that highway to be completed is in Fayette County.

Before the final design plans are completed and construction begins, a study of obtaining right-of-ways must be made. A public hearing will be held in Washington C.H. before these right-of-ways are obtained.

A state official was on hand Wednesday night to review the policy of purchasing right-of-ways.

He said all property must be appraised before the state purchases it.

Issue may surface again

Congress ends debate on abortion payments

WASHINGTON AP — Congress is ending its debate over public payments for poor women's abortions, but members already are predicting that the issue will come up again.

After more than four months of bitter argument, the House and Senate agreed Wednesday on conditions for abortion funding through the Medicaid program, which serves mostly poor people.

The agreement freed a $60.2 billion appropriation for the government's major social service agencies and guaranteed that the 240,000 employees involved would receive full paychecks before Christmas.

Without an agreement on the measure, their checks would have been cut in half as the agencies ran out of payroll money.

The dispute arose in connection with the funding authorization for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare in fiscal year 1978. Ten smaller agencies also depended upon the legislation for their budgets.

The compromise calls for abortion the death car whose husband, the Texas governor, was seriously wounded, thought the auto was hit by buckshot. Then she realized it was brain matter. "His brains are in my hand."

Moments before the second of two shots hit him, the president said: "Get me to a hospital," his last words.

The files flesh out a little the spectral image of Oswald ...

A 118 IQ grade-school student in New York City who would not salute the flag, preferred to fly paper airplanes in class and became a psychiatric problem.

A teen-ager who told a friend President Dwight D. Eisenhower should be killed.

A marine in Japan who had "an intense hatred" for anyone who called him "Harve" instead of Lee and was abusive on occasions, withdrawn on others and a troublemaker all the time."

A husband who told his Russian-born wife, Marina, that killing could be justified. Hitler, for instance.

A man who pretended his pointed finger was a gun and said "bang a bang" at his co-workers.

A man who knew rifles and told a New Orleans garage owner a small caliber rifle was more deadly than a larger one. At the time he owned an Italian military rifle of about .25 caliber that the Warren Commission determined was the assassination weapon.

Oswald's motive, then and now, remains conjectural, however.

In 1976, the Senate select committee that investigated intelligence abuses reported:

"The evidence suggests that during the Warren Commission investigation, top FBI officials were continually concerned with protecting the bureau's reputation and avoiding any criticism for not fulfilling investigative responsibilities ... Director Hoover, himself, perceived the Warren Commission as an adversary."

The worry that Oswald might have had accomplices also troubled the director. Hoover wrote his aides Dec. 12, 1963:

"I personally believe Oswald was the assassin; that the second aspect as to whether he was the only man gives me great concern."

"I didn't want to put speculation in the report; ... this was the reason I urged strongly that we not reach the conclusion that Oswald was the only man."

Numerous pages document the FBI's extensive search to trace Oswald's movements in September 1962, when he went to Mexico City to seek a visa to Cuba from its embassy there. Portions of the pages are blacked out, presumably to protect CIA surveillance techniques there.

Deaths, Funerals

Raymond W. Shelley

SABINA — Raymond W. Shelley, 84, of 122 E. Washington St., Sabina, died at 8:40 p.m. Wednesday in Fayette County Memorial Hospital, Washington C.H., where he had been a patient one day.

Born in Jasper Township, Fayette County, Mr. Shelley had spent most of his life in Sabina. He was a retired farmer. A veteran of World War I, he was a charter member of the Paul H. Hughey American Legion Post 25 in Washington C.H. and a member of the Clinton County Disabled American Veterans Division No. 58. He was a life member and past governor of the Sabina Moose Lodge No. 1244 and a member of the Wilmington Eagles Lodge.

He is survived by his wife, the former Dora Sutton, whom he married Aug. 16, 1938; a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rosalyn Shelley, of Grove City; 6 grandchildren and 2 great-grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. Olive Creamer, of Xenia, and Mrs. Charles (Dorothy) Crone, of Washington C.H., and two brothers, Hubert Shelley, of Sabina, and Harry Shelley, of Washington C.H.

He was preceded in death by a son, Paul; two sisters and five brothers. There will be no funeral services or calling hours. Mr. Shelley's body will be cremated and burial of the remains will be held at a later date in the Milledgeville-Plymouth Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Clinton County Children's Home, Wilmington, for birthday parties. Arrangements were completed by the Littleton Funeral Home in Sabina.

Prices rise

products have risen gradually.

Both food prices and wholesale prices rose rapidly in the spring, then trailed off or declined during the summer before rising again this fall. Farmers complain that while their prices have begun to rise, much of the wholesale price increase goes to middlemen.

While hoping the rate of inflation slows, government economists also want consumer spending and business investment to increase and thus expand the economy. They are worried about a possible slowdown in the middle of next year.

The Federal Reserve Board reported good signs of consumer activity for October in a report on consumer installment debt released Wednesday. Consumers increased their indebtedness by $2.63 billion, the largest rise in six months. Large installment credit usually means consumer confidence and increased business activity.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that businesses increased their spending on plants and equipment by 4.6 per cent in the third quarter, the largest gain since the first quarter of 1973. However, they indicated much smaller plans for spending through mid-1978, at a rate below the 9 per cent annual rate the administration favors.

Business mirror*Nation's two biggest brewing firms exchange accusations

By JOHN CUNNIF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It was viewed at first as another strategem in the bruising competition between the nation's two biggest brewers, Anheuser-Busch, sometimes called the king, and Miller Brewing, a growing, aggressive marketer.

It appears now that the issues may be more than a tempest in a bottle.

Involved are accusations of deliberate misrepresentation and exploitation of consumers, and claims that the news media and a government agency are being "used."

On November 10, Anheuser-Busch filed with the Federal Trade Commission a request for an investigation of Miller, its parent, Philip Morris, Inc., and its advertising agency, McCann-Erickson Worldwide.

Miller, said A-B, has been improperly insinuating that Lowenbrau, a quality beer that it distributes, is the original imported product that connoisseurs have savored for nearly five centuries, when in fact Miller now brews it domestically.

McCann-Erickson declined to comment, but the response from Miller was immediate and spirited. "We find it incredulous that the world's largest brewer would ask the FTC to protect them," it said, adding pointedly:

"It seems apparent that the crown on the King of Beers must be slipping."

But a study of the 32-page statement filed by A-B indicates that its accusations were motivated by more than, as Miller suggested, Lowenbrau's success in the "super-premium" market, where it competes with A-B Michelob.

Perhaps most importantly, A-B claimed that domestic Lowenbrau isn't even the same beer that it said the consumer market was led to believe was a successor to that which was first tapped from a keg in 1383.

It isn't, said A-B, even the same beer that was until recently imported from Germany, but which Miller now makes in the United States under a licensing agreement.

Contacted at the Lowenbrau Brewery in Germany, a spokesman seemed to concur. The domestic product he said, is "sort of a light beer that has been tested and found good for American tastes."

A-B listed these specifics in its complaint:

1. German-brewed Lowenbrau is made with 100 per cent barley malt and no adjuncts. Domestic Lowenbrau is 72 per cent by weight barley malt and 28 per cent corn grits.

2. German-brewed Loenbrau contains no non-natural additives. Domestic Lowenbrau contains potassium meta bisulfite, an antioxidant, and enzymatic chill-proofing compound, as well as kelcoloid to improve foam.

3. The German product is naturally carbonated, or krausened. The domestic brew is carbonated non-naturally by injection of carbon dioxide.

4. The German brew is fermented twice over a period in excess of six weeks. The domestic product is fermented once for a period of nine days.

When Miller Brewing was told that these parts of the A-B document might be published, it responded with a long statement saying that A-B was using the FTC and the media "to wage nothing more than a campaign of product disparagement in a competitive battle with us."

Said the spokesman: "To our knowledge this is the first time in the history of the FTC that a complainant.

"The fact is that this complainant, which you have a copy of, is not a public record, further confirms their use of the press in this competitive battle."

The spokesman added, "We are confident that our advertising, labeling and packaging is accurate, truthful and in compliance with the law." A detailed refutation would be filed with the FTC, he said.

Asked about the public versus private nature of the document, Stephen Newberg-Rinn, an FTC attorney, stated flatly: "It is in fact public." The decision to make it public can be made by the complainant, he said.

Because of apparent misunderstanding, he said, he had even called the Miller Brewing attorneys to emphasize the point.

After Miller Brewing files its answer to the complaint, he said, the matter will be reviewed and a recommendation made to the full commission.

How long is it expected to take? "If someone were going to die because of a product the commission would move quickly. This isn't one of those cases," he said.

Utilities renew pleas*Energy consumption rates eyed closely

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio's utility companies will be keeping a close watch on energy consumption rates today to see whether their call for conservation in the face of an early winter and a coal miners' strike has been heard.

The bitter cold snap which has settled in for the week has already caused scattered outages and has produced energy demand so high that one supplier cut back electrical voltage to 53 counties on Wednesday.

Utilities renewed their conservation pleas from last winter with a call for special efforts to save electricity.

Since most of Ohio's coal consumption is for production of electricity and the United Mine Workers are on strike, the energy companies are relying on conservation to make their coal stockpiles last several weeks.

Robert S. Ryan, director of the Ohio Energy and Resource Development

Agency, said the state has to cut about 15 per cent from its electricity consumption in coming weeks in order to make the utilities' stockpiled coal suffice.

"It's a 15 per cent reduction won't make a substantial difference, but it will make some difference in the length of time our present coal supplies will last."

"We just cannot look toward our society without electricity, so we must do everything to save electricity," Ryan said Wednesday.

Sections of northern Ohio were the first to experience energy cutbacks attributed to the cold weather, but the energy consumers probably did not notice the voltage dip.

For three hours Wednesday, Ohio Power Co. reduced the voltage to its 600,000 customers by 2.5 per cent. The utility serves 663 communities in 53 counties in 53 counties in north, central and east Ohio.

Richard Blaes, systems operations manager for the Canton-based utility which is part of American Electrical Power System — the nation's largest utility holding company — said the voltage reduction could not have been detected by the residential consumer.

Blaes said the action was necessary due to a heavy drain on generators, apparently from high settings on thermostats on electrically-powered heaters.

Other utilities reported no service curtailments, although the cold caused equipment problems and outages, especially in southwest Ohio.

Residents of West Chester, Ohio, in the area serviced by Cincinnati Gas and Electric Co., were forced to find shelter Tuesday night because electric power failed in mid-afternoon. Power was restored at midnight Wednesday. CG&E also had outages in Delhi, Mason and Edgewood, Ky., across the Ohio River from Cincinnati.

At Hamilton, Ohio, the municipally-owned gas plant added a propane converter Tuesday night to keep up with demand.

Hamill raps non-subsidy

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ice-skating star Dorothy Hamill says America must find a way to subsidize its Olympic aspirants — or settle for second best.

"In a few years, we won't be able to compete with the Russians and East Europeans in the Olympics," said the 1976 Olympic figure skating gold medalist.

"In fact, we can't compete with them now because of their subsidized programs," said Miss Hamill, 21, who is appearing here with the Ice Capades.

She estimated that her long training that ended with a gold medal at Innsbruck cost her three or four sponsors "up to $200,000."

Appearing at the news conference in a black suit and navy turtleneck, the three-time U.S. champion expressed concern over America's ability to compete with the nation's who subsidize their top athletes.

"Whether it is big companies subsidizing sports or what, I don't know what will save the U.S. Olympic teams."

"I don't think government subsidy is the answer," she said.

She said she will remain with the ice show at least two more years "or until I find I can't live out of a suitcase anymore."

She said the pressure of show business is different "because you have to psych yourself up every night to be good and look good."

Miss Hamill said she was feeling better after her hospitalization in Los Angeles for a bleeding ulcer "but it still hurts a little. It's a relief to know what's wrong with you."

However, she said her next goal will be "teaching blind and crippled kids to skate," but has doubts about eventually becoming a coach.

Dealing with Amin

The World Association of World Federalists wants to place President Idi Amin of Uganda on trial to answer for his "crimes against humanity". The group envisions a United Nations tribunal which could call Amin and his associates to account as "international criminals".

The motivation is sound; most civilized persons surely feel much the same about this self-declared "president for life" who has made torture and murder of those who oppose him a commonplace of Ugandan life. Some good might be done by a mock trial procedure meant to expose (in the words of a WAWF statement) "the heinous crimes being perpetrated daily on the people of Uganda."

This undertaking must be kept in perspective, however, for what it is: no more than an attempt to focus attention on Amin's conduct. This might be of some value, even though events in Uganda already have been widely publicized. But something more is needed - some way of imposing genuine sanctions that would force the Amin regime to curb its excesses.

There is one eminently practicable approach. Uganda depends heavily on its coffee exports; Amin relies on the proceeds to pay his mercenaries. A concerted boycott of Ugandan coffee, sustained until Amin bows to the pressure, would be an effective weapon.

Initiatives along this line already have been made. Rep. Robert Dornan of California has taken the lead in upbraiding the U.S. coffee industry for continuing to import Ugandan coffee.

What about 'human rights' in Panama?

Dictator Omar Torrijos of Panama has offered to resign if that is the price that must be exacted for getting the Panama Canal treaties past the U.S.

Senate. But President Jimmy Carter of the U.S. says that Torrijos is no problem.

Jimmy Carter is hardly the soul of consistency. For other heads of state are problems for Carter for doing no less and no more than Torrijos. South Africa's Vorster, for example, is being threatened with boycotts for behavior that Torrijos takes in his stride. I have before me a study made by Gustave Anguizola, "Violation of Human Rights and Civil Liberties in Panama," for the Council for Inter-American Security, a reputable organization whose directors include T. Coleman Andrews III, of the Stanford University Graduate Business School, and Dr. Roger W. Fontaine, the head of the Latin American Division of the Center of Strategic and International Studies of Georgetown University.

Dr. Anguizola is no fly-by-night. Born in Panama, he was educated at Indiana University and has had a long career in teaching at Purdue, New York State University and North Carolina State University. His grandfather was Panama's secretary of the treasury.

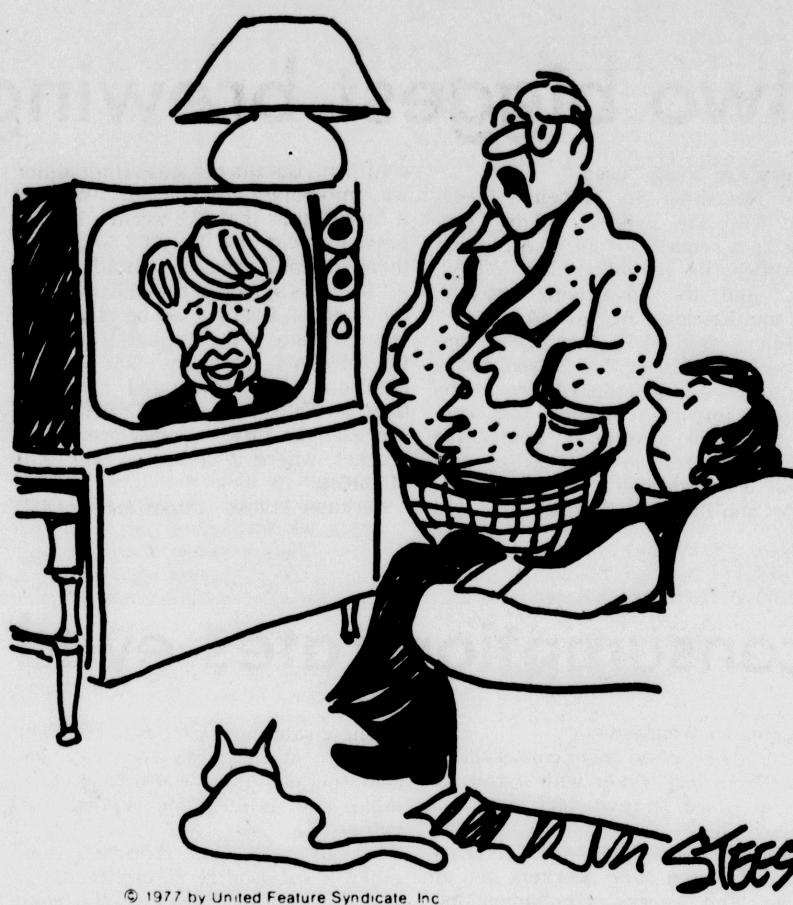

So much for credentials that should have some weight with Jimmy Carter if he really cares about accurate reporting on the status of human rights in the world beyond our shores. And now for the parallels. The Vorster regime in South Africa is under fire because of the mysterious death in prison of Steve Biko, a black who had been critical of the politics of apartheid. Well, the disappearance of the Roman Catholic priest Hector Gallego in Panama is no more and no less mysterious than the circumstances surrounding Biko's death. Dr. Anguizola tells us that Father Gallego, who had offended the local relatives of Torrijos in the course of organizing agricultural cooperatives in his parish, was seized in his own home by National Guard G-2 agents who carted him off to an unknown fate. The Torrijos regime promised a public investigation, but was apparently reneged on it. Another Catholic priest, Father Pedro Hernandez Robal, has said that Father Gallego "was thrown into the sea from an airplane." Father Hernandez points his accusing finger at Omar Torrijos as "head of the Panamanian National Guard."

Torture, says Dr. Anguizola, "is widely employed by G-2 guards. Bodies which have been discovered and examined show evidence of various types of corporal abuse such as the body of Ruben Miro, a lawyer, who was tortured and murdered after his arrest." And when the body of Miss Marlene Mendizabal, an anti-communist student at the University of Panama, was found, Miss Mendizabal's mother was "badly beaten by government agents during her attempt to investigate her daughter's May, 1976, murder."

Publications have been suppressed in South Africa, and the United Nations organization has responded by forcing the suspension of arms shipments to the Vorster government. But nobody in the U.N. is talking about ostracizing the Panamanian government for comparable censorships. Dr. Anguizola says that "two new private papers, Quibio and La Opinion Publica, were squelched even before full-scale publication could begin," and "Editora La Verdad, which was to publish La Opinion Publica, was closed down for having previously printed subversive materials."

Vorster, in South Africa, has defended his censorship on the ground that it is necessary to safeguard the state. In Panama, according to Dr. Anguizola, "at least 1,300 Panamanian professionals, businessmen, students and labor union members" have been exiled during the past eight years for expressing themselves too freely. The safety of the state is the justification for these wholesale banishments.

So, when Jimmy Carter, who has been outspoken about South Africa, says that Torrijos is "no problem," one wonders about the logic of the human rights crusade that has been proclaimed from the White House Oval Office. There appears to be nothing even-handed about it. As it has been pointed out, Jimmy Carter has not been talking about giving the Panama Canal to "some great Latin American hero" (as he put it). He has been recommending the relinquishment of the canal to a country that has had the worst political and civil rights record in all of Latin America on the Freedom House scale of 1-7.

College campus spying by CIA in 1960s eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Campus harassment of CIA recruiters during the Vietnam era prompted the use of agents to identify potential college trouble spots, according to newly released CIA documents.

The documents do not on their face reveal a systematic spying effort on American college campuses during the 1960s.

Instead, they show an effort, mainly by reviewing university publications and establishing liaison with local authorities, to give recruiters early warning of demonstrations or possible violence aimed at disrupting their activities.

The documents also contain a memo in which then-CIA Director Richard Helms told Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that the inclusion of U.S. students in a survey of student dissidents worldwide was potentially embarrassing because "This is an area not within the charter of this agency."

The documents, some of them censored for security reasons, were obtained through Freedom of Information Act suit filed by former national security assistant Morton Halperin and former CIA employee John Marks. The documents were made available to reporters Tuesday by the Campaign to Stop Government Spying, which Halperin heads.

Many of the documents sought by the suit were denied by the CIA on national security grounds.

Those that were released contain a description of how, beginning in 1967, the CIA called on its field offices around the country to aid and protect CIA campus recruiters.

A memo said field agents "developed files on the universities and colleges, came to know all the campus security people, special units in the local and state police, etc."

It said some of the information developed by agents "would indicate that they attended some of the dissident meetings."

But it said the agents could only advise recruiters on whether or not to visit a particular campus. If the recruiters ignored advice to stay away, "we would send a man to the fringe area, attempt to spot buildups and advise further action," the CIA memo said.

The report on American student dissidents about which Helms expressed concern concluded that "communist front groups have been permitted to participate in some of the student organizations but have not succeeded in controlling them."

Dear Abby:
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Boy's pot-smoking
disturbs his aunt

DEAR ABBY: A year ago I took in my brother's son, who is now 22. He had a serious disagreement with his parents and moved out. He has always been a favorite of mine. He is a beautiful, intelligent young man, but he has one fault. He smokes marijuana. I became aware of this shortly after he moved in with me. One thing I admire about him is that he will not lie.

I have tried to accept his smoking, but I cannot. He doesn't smoke at home, but I finally gave an ultimatum to quit smoking entirely or to leave. He wants to stay, and says he's trying to quit, but I doubt if he can.

If I turn him out, he will be completely alone. I hate to see this happen to him. I am his only contact with "family," and the only good influence in his life. He loves and respects me. I love him, too, but cannot tolerate his smoking marijuana.

NOME WITHHELD

DEAR NAME: I am told that marijuana is NOT addictive, so your nephew could quit if he really wanted to. Many have done so.

I do NOT condone the use of marijuana, but as long as he doesn't smoke it in your home I think it would be a mistake to ask him to leave. He desperately needs your positive influence in his life.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are both devout Catholics. We believe in clean living and turning away from evil.

My fiance is going to be best man at a wedding, and the bachelor stag party is coming up soon. There will be alcohol and porno movies, and I heard they've even hired a dancing girl to jump out of a cake with nothing on!

I have pleaded with my fiance not to go to this party. He says he hates to go, but there is no way he can get out of it because he's the best man.

Abby, do you think a good Christian man should be forced to witness such lowdown, disgusting entertainment if he doesn't really want to?

SICK INSIDE

DEAR SICK: No. But who is "forcing" him? As best man he could "make an appearance" but skip the entertainment.

DEAR ABBY: Jim and I are both 30. We've been married for seven years, and he's got to be the pickiest eater in the world! He hates all vegetables and most fruits, and he won't touch meat, fish or chicken. He practically lives on peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. Can you believe this is a grown man and the father of two?

Dining out is embarrassing because all Jim ever orders is a peanut butter and jelly sandwich and a glass of milk. And when we're at the home of friends, he pushes his food around on the plate and doesn't eat any of it. When the hostess notices it, she asks if something is wrong with the food, and I want to crawl under the table!

Before we go to someone's home, I give him a peanut butter and jelly sandwich so he won't be hungry.

What do you advise? I don't want to give up my social life because of my husband's childish eating habits.

CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR CLEAR: You needn't sacrifice your social life because of your husband's kooky eating habits. Your friends will soon become accustomed to his idiosyncrasies and accept it. If I were you, I'd be more concerned about his health. He's asking for nutritional bankruptcy.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Dec. 8, the 342nd day of 1977. There are 23 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1941, the United States and Britain declared war on Japan.

On this date: In 1765, the inventor of the cotton gin, Eli Whitney, was born in Westboro, Mass.

In 1776, George Washington's army, having retreated through New Jersey, crossed the Delaware River and landed in Pennsylvania.

In 1949, the Chinese Nationalist government moved from the China mainland to Formosa as the Communists pressed their attacks.

In 1966, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed on a treaty to prohibit nuclear weapons in outer space.

In 1974, Greece voted decisively to become a republic and eliminate a monarchy that went back to 1832.

Ten years ago: The Soviets warned West Germany against what Moscow officials called a growing and dangerous neo-Nazi movement in that country.

Five years ago: Life magazine announced it would cease regular publication at the end of the year, 35 years after its birth.

One year ago: A politically neutral Moslem who had been educated at the University of Indiana, Selim al Hoss, was chosen as the new premier of Lebanon.

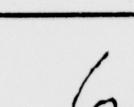

Today's birthdays: Entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. is 52 years old. Actor Maximilian Schell is 47.

Thought for today: Even weak men when united are powerful - Johann Schiller, German poet and playwright, 1759-1805.

Choral society concert attracts more than 300

Some 300 area residents packed into the First Presbyterian Church Sunday to hear the Fayette County Choral Society perform "The Messiah."

W. Warren Parker of Middletown, directed the 34-voice chorus and 18-piece orchestra presentation which lasted nearly two hours.

The program began with the first section of Johann Sebastian Bach's "Christmas Oratorio," which marked the first time the piece has ever been sung in Washington C.H., according to Mrs. Howard McNabb.

Looking forward to its fund raising projects, the choral society is preparing for a drawing to be held in the coming months, according to Mrs. Mike Campbell. The first prize in the drawing will be a hind quarter of beef donated by Charles Wehner. Second prize will be a fore quarter of beef.

The Fayette County Choral Society's Lenten Concert to be presented Mar. 12 will feature Haydn's "Creation" and several Easter anthems. Preparation for the Easter program will begin with rehearsals on Jan. 16 at 7:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, 214 N. Hinde St.

Anyone wishing to donate to the society as a patron or donor may do so by contacting Mrs. Norman Armbrust, Jeff Sheridan or Anita Pruitt.

VFW auxiliary plans for party

The Burnett-Ducey VFW Auxiliary met recently with 11 members present.

President Mary Wilson opened the meeting and chaplain Esther Hyer gave the opening prayer. Patriotic instructor, Fanny Hooks gave the pledge to the flag and the group sang the National Anthem.

An inspection was held by District 11 senior vice president Mary Elann, and Erma Mercer of post 1380 Lancaster inspected the books.

Mrs. Ambers Conley gave a report on the National Home and Ohio cottage in Michigan. It was reported that the gifts for the veterans in Chillicothe have been purchased and wrapped and will be delivered Sunday. Esther Hyer reported on the Community service project.

The next meeting will be Jan. 2 at 7:30 p.m. at the post hall.

Welcome Wagon party conducted

The Landmark building was the setting for the Welcome Wagon Club engaged girl party with hostess Carolyn Yates and assistant hostess Jeannie Lawrie.

The Welcome Wagon sponsors presented six girls with many lovely gifts. Refreshments were then served to the brides-to-be and their guests.

The sponsors represented were Craig's by Miss Judy Butcher, Patton's Office Supplies, Kenneth's Design Group, Steen's, Landmark, Young Image, Cartwright Hauling, Jay-Gar Photo, Huntington Bank, Kroger Sav-On, Downtown Drug, Court Cable, and two new sponsors, Long John Silver's, and Robbins Flowers and Gifts in Greenfield. Door prizes were donated by Craig's, and the Huntington Bank.

Those attending were Miss Joyce Ellis and Freida Ellis, Sandi Kellenberger and Diane Conley, Kathy Unkefer, Janet Reid and Mrs. Ruth Reid, Kim Kirk, and Mrs. James and Tamie Kirk and Eileen Fisher and Gladys Fisher.

After enjoying fellowship and potluck supper, President Bob Ellars called the meeting to order. Mrs. Harry H. Campbell gave devotions on Thanksgiving. Mrs. Ellars gave the secretary's report and Mrs. Don Breakfield gave the financial report. Plans were completed for the annual Christmas dinner to be held at 6 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 11 at the church. Maxine Gilmer will prepare the dinner. Mrs. Walter Carman, Mrs. Maner Boggs, and Mrs. Ellars comprise the decorating committee. Mrs. Michael Campbell is in charge of the entertainment. There will also be a $2 gift exchange. Reservations are to be made with Mrs. Harry Campbell by Dec. 8.

Mrs. Michael Campbell reported that all Christmas card orders were picked up and will be distributed.

Members present were: Rev. and Mrs. Noel McLaren, Mr. and Mrs. Ellars, Mrs. Boggs, Mr. and Mrs. Carman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Olan Bentley, Mr. and Mrs. Breakfield, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Campbell.

St. Colman Women slate Yule party

The next meeting of the Women's Club of St. Colman's Catholic Church will be the Christmas party, Dec. 19 in Colman Hall.

It will begin at 6:30 p.m. with a potluck supper. A social hour will follow with games and fun. Each person is asked to bring a Christmas wrapped bingo prize. All women in the parish are invited.

After the auction refreshments were served.

New Martinsburg Ladies Aid holds covered dish supper

The New Martinsburg Ladies Aid met recently at the church for a covered dish supper. Russell Grice gave the blessing. Mrs. Grice and Mrs. Naomi Wing were the hostesses.

Mrs. Joe McClure, president, was in charge of the meeting and opened with the poem, "Rest".

Mrs. Robert Ritter had devotions. Her theme was "Thanksgiving" and "Beware, Lest We Forget". On the alter with the Bible and candle were corn, representing temporal blessings, a flag for our free land and a cross for salvation. She closed with the thought that each day should be Thanksgiving.

Roll call was answered by "what we are thankful for".

The chairman of the nominating committee, Mrs. Wing, read the new officers for the coming year. They are president, Mrs. Edward Carson; devotional leader and vice-president, Mrs. Robert Ritter, secretary, Louise Ritter, treasurer, Mrs. Grice and press reporter Mrs. Nathaniel Tway.

Christmas party held by Barracks, auxiliary

The annual Christmas party of Fayette County Barracks No. 2291, Veterans of World War I and Auxiliary was held Thursday at the home of Mrs. Allen Sells.

Yuletide decorations were effectively carried out throughout the home and in accenting the table appointment.

Invocation was given by Rev. Cloyce Copley after which the 18 members present enjoyed a delicious covered dish luncheon at the noon hour.

Following the pleasant social time, each group assembled separately for a meeting, the Barracks being in charge of Commander Calvin Johnson and the Auxiliary with Mrs. Copley presiding.

Conducting the Auxiliary's realistic service were Mrs. Jess Whitmer, conductress, and Mrs. Nellie Kennedy, chaplain. The pledge of allegiance followed. Reports and communications were presented. Mrs. Sells spoke regarding the delivery of Thanksgiving cheer plates to shut-ins. She also announced that the 1978 membership roster now stands at 30.

Christmas contributions were made to the VA Hospital, Chillicothe, for coupon books to be used by the veterans and to Paul H. Hughey Post No. 25, American Legion, for the annual Christmas party for needy children.

Donations were also made to both the Salvation Army and the South Side Church of Christ teen prayer breakfast program.

Mrs. Charles Wagner made a presentation of a lovely gift to Mrs. Whitmer.

Upon adjournment it was decided to hold the Jan. 5 meeting at the American Legion hall.

Those in attendance for the occasion in addition to Mrs. Sells were Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Johnson, Rev. and Mrs. Cloyce Copley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Jess Whitmer, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wilson, Mrs. Lee Draper, Mrs. Nellie Kennedy, Mrs. George Hooks, Mrs. Clarence Hackett, Mrs. Barbara Thompson, Mr. Burris Tharp and Mr. Lewis Ramsey.

Initiation ceremony held at Phi Beta Psi's party

The annual Phi Beta Psi Christmas party for all active, inactive, and associate members was held Monday evening at the Washington Country Club, which was beautifully decorated for the Christmas season.

Following a social hour and delicious dinner, the members were entertained by the Suite Sixteen, a group of 16 Washington C.H. Middle School girls under the direction of Mrs. Rick Stinson. The group presented a lovely selection of Christmas music.

Initiation was then held for the eight new members of Gamma chapter: Mrs. Phil (Cindy) Lewis, Mrs. Gordon (Karen) Lowe, Mrs. Steve (Connie) Yambor, Mrs. Robert (Ruth) Stayrook, Mrs. Bruce (Vicki) Ream, Mrs. William (Carol) Heinz, Mrs. Lonnie (Beth) Wilson, and Mrs. William (Judy) Pool. The initiation ceremony was conducted by the president, Mrs. John H. Roszmann. She was assisted by Mrs. Ralph Gebhart, Mrs. Stinson, Mrs. Max Schlitter, Mrs. Mike Flynn, and Mrs. David Willis.

Following the ceremony, bridge was enjoyed by those present. Winners for the evening were Mrs. Eddie McCoy,

Rising food prices threaten inflation

WASHINGTON AP — Rising food prices are threatening to send the inflation rate climbing again during the holiday season.

After declining for five months, the prices farmers got for their products rose 1 per cent in each of the last two months.

Government economists were looking to see whether that increase would be reflected again today's release of the November Wholesale Price Index.

In September, wholesale prices rose 0.8 per cent, the biggest gain in six months, mainly because of a 2.4 per cent rise in food prices.

Wholesale price increases usually take a few months to show up in the Consumer Price Index, which measures the nation's inflation rate. The index went up a moderate 0.3 per cent in each of the last three months.

Julius Shiskin, the Labor Department's commissioner of labor statistics, who had said he expected the higher prices to show up on grocery shelves in October, said the increases may be felt in the November or December index instead.

The Carter administration has set an inflation goal of about 6 per cent for the year. The rate for the first 10 months was 5.9 per cent.

Inflation has fluctuated this year, with drastic rises and falls in the cost of food, while prices of many other products have risen gradually.

Both food prices and wholesale prices rose rapidly in the spring, then trailed off or declined during the summer before rising again this fall. Farmers complain that while their prices have begun to rise, much of the wholesale price increase goes to middlemen.

While hoping the rate of inflation slows, government economists also want consumer spending and business investment to increase and thus expand the economy. They are worried about a possible slowdown in the middle of next year.

The Federal Reserve Board reported good signs of consumer activity for October in a report on consumer installment debt released Wednesday. Consumers increased their indebtedness by $2.63 billion, the largest rise in six months. Large installment credit usually means consumer confidence and increased business activity.

The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that businesses increased their spending on plants and equipment by 4.6 per cent in the third quarter, the largest gain since the first quarter of 1973. However, they indicated much smaller plans for spending through mid-1978, at a rate below the 9 per cent annual rate the administration favors.

A winter storm watch was in effect for Ohio today including heavy snow warnings for the northwest through tonight. Travelers advisories were posted for the remaining counties.

Accumulations of four to six inches were forecast for the northwest sections and one to three inches are expected to cover the remainder of Ohio.

Temperatures remained frigid through the night with Toledo recording a record seven below zero for the date early this morning. Warmer air will invade southern and eastern sections late this afternoon and early tonight, bringing brief relief from the freezing temperatures which frosted the state Tuesday and Wednesday. The warming temperatures will cause the snow to mix with or chance for a brief period of time as the disturbance intensifies.

LOS ANGELES AP — George Meany gavels the AFL-CIO's 12th constitutional convention to order today with the 1,200 delegates worried about

Shoplift incident checked by city's police officers

A local man was arrested on a charge of shoplifting Wednesday night.

Washington C.H. police officers charged James E. Ellars Jr., 35, of 323 N. Hinde St., in connection with an incident at the Kroger Sav-on store, 548 Clinton Ave.

According to the police department report, a security officer at the store observed a male subject place a flashlight in his jacket pocket and leave the store. The officer stopped the man outside the store and reportedly recovered the $1.59 item.

Police officers were summoned and they arrested Ellars on the charge. He is currently being held in the city jail in lieu of bond.

Over $300 worth of tools were stolen from a Lakeview Avenue residence, police officers reported Wednesday.

Paul E. Beedy, 45, of 1025 Lakeview Ave., stated to investigating officers he had gone to his garage behind his house Wednesday to work on his car and discovered a tool box was missing.

The box was described as a green, three-drawer type valued at $50. It reportedly contained miscellaneous tools, including a 3/4-inch-drive socket set and a set of open-end wrenches, with a reported value of $200. Also stolen was a tac-dwell meter.

Beedy stated there were other tools in the garage, but only the tool box and meter were taken. The theft occurred sometime between 9:30 a.m. Sunday and 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Fayette County sheriff's deputies reported an unidentified person drove away from Garner's Union 76 service station, U.S. 35 at I-71, early Wednesday without paying for nearly 14 gallons of gasoline.

The subject reportedly pulled into the station, had his car filled and while the attendant was busy with another customer, drove away.

Dean of mayors is hospitalized

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Erastus Corning II, dean of the nation's mayors, was reported in satisfactory condition after surgery on his hip.

Surgeons implanted an artificial ball-and-socket joint in Corning's right hip Wednesday to replace the natural joint, which had been damaged by arthritis are saying publicly that he should step down in favor of younger leadership. But it is only talk by a minority.

Although slowed by age, Meany's grip on the 13.5 million-member labor federation remains strong, and he is assured of unanimous re-election to the presidency he has held since 1955.

The convention comes at a time when the AFL-CIO is beset with serious problems:

— Its ranks have fallen by 500,000 since 1975 and its treasury of $475,000 in the red this year. Leaders largely blame unemployment and will ask the delegates from 106 affiliated unions to raise monthly dues to the international union from 13 cents per member to 16 cents. This will raise an additional $4.8 million a year.

— Public opinion polls show that labor leaders are held in low esteem by most Americans, in part due to repeated allegations of corruption within some unions, unpopular strikes by public employees and aging union leadership.

Cheap foreign imports are costing thousands of jobs in key manufacturing industries, such as steel, auto, clothing and electrical equipment, where union membership is strongest.

Labor is also having problems with Congress and the White House in achieving its ambitious legislative goals.

— We've got problems, but what institution in America today doesn't have problems?" asked Kenneth Blaylock, president of the American Federation of Government Employees and, at 42, the youngest member of the AFL-CIO's 33-man executive council.

He believes some of labor's problems are due to its own successes. "The average union member has got a job, two cars in the garage and maybe a cabin on the lake. So he's somewhat comfortable and doesn't relate these benefits to his union."

William Winpisinger, the outspoken newly elected president of the International Association of Machinists, says that while he has "enormous respect" for Meany, there is a general feeling among his members that Meany should step down.

"We've got an image problem, and that's the image," Winpisinger said.

However, he adds that he has no plans to oppose Meany's re-election, saying, "There are too few of us."

Washington Merry-Go-Round*Schlesinger sabotaged Carter energy plan

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary James Schlesinger has personally undermined the president's energy policies by managing to infuriate nearly every liberal legislator on Capitol Hill.

The liberal bloc has long viewed the former Nixon defense secretary as a Republican retreat far more sympathetic to the tribulations of the oil industry than the problems of consumers. Some congressmen have angrily called for his resignation. Instead of repairing his relations with Congress, however, the aloof energy czar has in recent weeks added fuel to the fire of protest engulfing the White House.

He antagonized Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., for example, when he failed to notify Congress about his proposed method for selling oil drilling leases along the North Atlantic coast. These offshore leases have traditionally been grabbed up by the big oil companies which are able to outbid smaller firms for the right to drill on federally owned land.

The giant conglomerates that buy up all the leases, however, are entitled to keep most of the profits for themselves. They have made a fortune, therefore, by selling the oil they discover on public lands.

But congressional liberals are trying to convince the White House to make more use of an alternate system called "royalty bidding." It would allow smaller firms to obtain offshore leases with relatively modest downpayments. Later, they would fork over a far more generous share of the profits to the government.

Schlesinger, however, doesn't like the idea. Without bothering to tell Congress, he informed Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus in a private letter that the Administration will oppose royalty bidding for the North Atlantic leases. "There may be several inherent problems with royalty bidding," explained Schlesinger, "including the possibility of excessive amounts of resources being left in the ground."

Kennedy got wind of Schlesinger's backstage maneuver and quickly fired off a furious protest. "Many members of Congress," he wrote, "have been deeply concerned over the growing control of our domestic energy resources by a handful of major oil companies." The current system of bidding, Kennedy insisted, is a "device which virtually ensures control... by the major companies."

These firms, the senator reminded Schlesinger, will demand top prices for any offshore oil they find. Schlesinger's plan "risks permanently placing the development of new oil reserves in the hands of those companies that have a conspicuous interest in protecting the stability of world oil prices."

Kennedy fired a parting shot at Schlesinger's style of playing monopoly. "I am particularly disturbed that you apparently made your recommendation... without consultation with concerned members of Congress," he declared. "I find the secrecy surrounding your proposal especially distressing."

On the other side of the Hill, dozens of House liberals are seething at Schlesinger for undercutting their bargaining position with the Senate in the battle over President Carter's energy legislation. The congressmen have stubbornly refused to raise the price of natural gas or give any oil tax revenues back to the oil barons. Schlesinger, however, recently announced, without warning, that the White House might be willing to compromise on these crucial points.

The next day, Schlesinger called an angry Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., at home and attempted to explain his remarks. Then he invited some liberal congressmen to lunch to smooth their feathers, but succeeded only in ruffling them further.

"We have to know where you stand," Rep. Andrew Maguire, D-N.J., snapped at Schlesinger. "We're getting mixed signals. The question is whether we will win this with the Administration or by ourselves."

"What I said was misinterpreted," Schlesinger replied. "We prefer the House bill." He said he had "no idea" why other top officials were suggesting compromises on the bill.

"The name of the game is leverage," Maguire shot back. "You are leading the charge toward compromise on your own bill," Schlesinger insisted that "the president will not sign a bad bill." He would not explain further.

Moffett told Schlesinger that up to 70 House liberals might vote against a diluted compromise. But the congressmen were later shouting among themselves over how much they should surrender. "I think the whole thing is falling apart," one participant glumly told us.

Footnote: The Energy Department has now told Kennedy it will consider having some form of royalty bidding for several North Atlantic leases. The department was given 24 hours to make its recommendation and had no time to consult with Congress, a spokesman said.

Love Thine Enemies: Former members of a Nazi SS division are scheduled to be guests of honor next August at a St. Louis reunion of the American 70th Division veterans after conducting joint wreath-laying ceremonies for Nazi war dead in the German town of Boppard.

We reported at that time that the U.S. Army provided a chaplain and a ceremonial band for the cemetery service. Now we have learned that the American visitors invited the former SS men of the 6th Mountain Division to attend their St. Louis get-together for another round of partying and camaraderie.

A one-time 70th Division colonel has written us that members of the 6th Mountain Division were "nice" Nazis, not at all like their Storm Troopers brethren who ruthlessly ran the dread Gestapo and manned Hitler's extermination camps, gas chambers and ovens.

He credits his recent German hosts for holding 250 Americans as prisoners of war without murdering them, of abstaining from firing at American ambulances and of letting eight American officers escape without shooting at them. Other World War II veterans question, however, whether this entitles them to a red carpet welcome to this country next year.

Ohio Perspective

Four-month supply of coal stockpiled

By TOM DIEMER

Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The state of Ohio has stockpiled 130,000 tons of coal, a four-month supply, and a contingency plan is in place to deal with the effects of any long-range miners strike.

"The plan is workable and ready to go in the event of a prolonged strike," said Rep. Thomas J. Carney, D-Boardman. "The plan assures the citizens of Ohio the confidence they need in the winter months that we can survive without severe economic consequences."

If the walkout by the United Mine Workers of America is short-lived, some of the more extreme elements of the plan will not have to be implemented.

Devised by the Ohio Energy and Resource Development Agency (ERDA), several steps outlined in the 38-page Coal Contingency Plan have already been undertaken, including the stockpiling.

It seeks to insure continuation of essential state services by loading up with coal at state institutions, particularly those providing human needs, such as hospitals and nursing homes.

Private concerns are also being encouraged through an informational program to build up their own coal supplies and monitoring program is under way to keep track of supply for "essential users."

If the strike drags into the new year and beyond, Gov. James A. Rhodes will be asked to consider a curtailment plan for electric utilities, ranging from a 50-day supply, down to the point where 10 days worth of coal is left.

In that kind of an extreme situation, most non-residential customers would face some curtailment of electric service and "rolling blackouts" could halt service to certain selected distribution circuits on a rotating basis.

Mahoney seated as president #### of county board of realtors

Bart Mahoney, 724 Yeoman St., has been installed as president of the Fayette County Board of Realtors.

Mahoney, who established his own real estate firm in Washington C.H. in early 1976 following a five-year association with another local firm, succeeds James Polk of the local Polk Real Estate firm as president of the county board of realtors.

Mahoney, who has held a real estate salesperson's license since 1964, received his broker's license in 1976 and subsequently established his own real estate firm.

Other officers of the county board are Steve Lewis, vice president; Gary Anders, secretary, and Ron Weade, treasurer. Members of the board of directors are Mac Dews Sr., Thomas H. Mark and Mrs. John (Betty) Scott. Polk will serve a one-year term on the board as immediate past president.

Mahoney was seated during the board's annual Christmas party held recently in the Mahan Building on the Fayette County Fairgrounds.

Some readers may need quick course in SALT talks jargon

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Everyone who thinks MIRV is the host of a television variety show, raise your right hand.

Now, all of you who think ICBM is a big computer company, raise your hands.

The same for those of you who think ULMS is a city in Germany.

All of you with your hands up need a basic course in the language of SALT. Not the stuff you sprinkle on hamburgers, but the Strategic Arms

Limitation Talks.

If the negotiations now underway in Geneva between the United States and the Soviet Union progress as predicted, a SALT treaty setting limits on the two superpowers' nuclear arsenals will be submitted to the Senate for ratification sometime next year.

The debate on that treaty will produce more clusters of initials than the onset of the New Deal.

Senators will hold forth at length on the issue of MIRVed ICBM's. MIRV is the weapons buff's way of referring to a multiple independently targeted re-entry vehicle. An ICBM is an intercontinental ballistic missile.

Bolt that down and you end up with a great big rocket that carries a bunch of nuclear warheads that shoot off in different directions.

An ULMS is an undersea long-range missile system.

These few terms are just the beginning. Once you've mastered them, you'll be ready to learn about the MLMB, SLBM, ALCM, SNVL and SNDV.

And then there's the story of the State

Department spokesman who was briefing reporters and read a statement identifying an official as "deputy assistant secretary, DOS."

The spokesman paused and asked, "What does that mean, department of ...?"

"State," shouted the assembled reporters.

"I've been done in again by the acronyms in this building," said an embarrassed DOS spokesman.

The women's movement has had its impact on the drafters of the latest version of the Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill.

In one section, the proposed legislation authorizes the president to act "to the extent he or she deems it desirable."

Members of Congress struggling to come up with a compromise energy bill are often less than complimentary when speaking about Energy Secretary James Schlesinger. In general, the complaint on Capitol Hill frequently is that Schlesinger would help win passage of the president's energy package if he'd keep his mouth shut.

Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H., put it this way recently: "The president ought to give Mr. Schlesinger a Christmas present of a short leash and a muzzle."

During one conference committee session, Durkin complained about the section of the House bill that cited standards for states to use in setting electric utility rates.

The New Hampshire senator referred to it as a "laundry list."

Carter can claim victory

Panel okays tax for gas guzzlers

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter can claim an important victory in congressional negotiators' approval of a tax on fuel-wasting cars. But a final agreement on the toughest energy problems seems as elusive as ever.

If accepted by a second conference committee and then by the House and Senate, the auto tax would cost buyers of inefficient 1979-model cars up to $550, a figure that would soar to as much as $3,850 on 1985 models.

The tax was approved Wednesday by the conference committee on energy taxes. Another part of the compromise approved by the committee would allow the 19 million motorists who itemize income tax deductions to continue to take a deduction for state and local gasoline taxes. The House had voted to end that tax break.

Even with those agreements, it seems unlikely that Congress will be able to wrap up work this year on Carter's energy program.

The two energy conference committees still face the toughest issues of all — the price of natural gas, a tax on domestic crude oil to force conservation and the distribution of revenues from that tax.

There appears to be a hardening of positions on key issues.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who supports Carter's House-approved plan to keep federal controls on the price of natural gas, said, "We have no leeway in our position, absolutely no flexibility."

Rep. Anthony Moffett, D-Conn., said an increasing number of House members "would certainly rather have no bill than to move too far toward deregulation" of natural gas prices, which is favored by the Senate.

And Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., the chief Senate delegate at the tax committee, was sharply critical of the Carter administration for what he called its refusal to compromise on giving the oil and gas industry additional incentives to increase production.

The House-Senate panel considering natural gas faced another session today with little prospect of progress.

The tax panel, after approving the auto tax, adjourned until next week to give staff members time to work out some proposals for taxing factories and power plants that burn large amounts of oil or natural gas.

The vote on the auto tax was the first major agreement reached by the tax conferees in 11 days.

The tax is not expected to save a great deal of energy, only about 175,000 barrels of oil a day compared to current U.S. consumption of 18 million barrels a day. But backers view the tax as a highly visible tool to make Americans aware of the need to conserve fuel.

The tax would be paid directly by the buyer of any car that does not meet minimum standards.

JUVENILE COURT

A number of juvenile traffic cases have been heard by Fayette County Juvenile Court Judge Rollo Marchant.

Gregory M. Coleman, 17, of 47 Joanne Drive, had his driver's license suspended indefinitely and was placed on probation following his arrest by Washington C.H. Police on a reckless operation charge.

David Michael Beatty, 16, Greenfield, had his license suspended for 30 days and was ordered to attend the next defensive driving course after he was cited for driving left of center by the Fayette County Sheriff's Department.

Barry S. Leslie, 16, of 804 Lincoln Drive, had his license suspended for 25 days and was ordered to attend the next defensive driving course. He was cited for speeding by city police.

Marty J. Huffman, 16, of 428 Warren Ave., had his license suspended for 22 days and was ordered to attend the next defensive driving course after being cited for speeding by the Ohio Highway Patrol.

Judge Marchant approved of discipline imposed by parents and ordered six other juvenile traffic offenders to attend the next defensive driving course.

The were Sonja Lynn Dilley, 16, of 401 E. Elm St., failure to yield the right of way; Rodney A. Stroup, 17, of 320 Grove Ave., excessive noise; Bret A. Wilson, 17, of 4992 U.S. 62 SW, reckless operation; David A. Potter, 17, of 645 Woodland Drive, speeding; Kristal E. Yankie, 17, Greenfield, reckless operation; and James K. Matthews, 17, of 4398 Miami Trace Road, left of center.

Attendance jumps

Taft Broadcasting Co. said attendance at its Kings Island amusement park near Kings Mills, Ohio, was down 1 per cent during the summer over the previous year.

Spending by visitors was up 10 per cent, however, from $12.33 per person in the summer of 1976 to $13.56 this summer.

Taft executives blamed the slight decline on summer heat.

In Vinton County

Snow is only cargo at Ohio coal mine

WILKESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Snow is the only cargo on the immobile conveyor belts at the Vinton County coal mine where 24-year-old Bill Cray works.

The three-day-old strike by 160,000 United Mine Workers has idled Cray and the conveyor belts which usually take the coal he mines along a black, mechanical river to a nearby electrical power plant.

Cray, participating in his second strike at Southern Ohio Coal Co.'s Raccoon No. 3 near Wilkesville, joined the mine four years ago and endured the strike of 1974. But he's still concerned about the fact that he could be without a paycheck for several months.

"Everybody is looking for a longer strike this time compared to three years ago. Sure, I'm worried, but I don't have much choice. There's no way we'll work without a contract," Cray, a mechanic-electrician, said Wednesday.

Cray, vice-president of UMW Local 1957, is one of Ohio's 10,000 union miners. Like the others, he has one more paycheck coming before he's on his own.

Cray is single, so he may have it easier than strikers with families, especially since the strike comes at the beginning of the holiday season. Under the UMW contract which expired at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, miners like Cray received an average straight-time hourly wage of $7.80.

"We knew it was coming. People prepared in different ways. We had deductions from our paychecks put in savings. You just have to cut it down and stash some back," he said.

"A lot of the miners will try to get little jobs when they can. But since I'm a union officer, my duties will be mainly with the union.

"Right now we're just trying to stop non-union coal from coming in. Pretty much of it is stopped already. But there are rumors — we don't know how true — that non-union coal is coming in from West Virginia," he said.

No picketing has been reported at

Ohio's major union mines, nor at the predominantly non-union strip mines scattered around southern and eastern

Ohio.

Cray said he has used some of his free time to roam Vinton County in a caravan of union members to check on activities at non-union mines. The miners don't object to maintenance work being carried out, but will not tolerate the mining of coal by supervisory personnel or others.

Ex-state worker services slated

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Burial services for the first woman to work for the Ohio State Employment Service were set for Thursday in Columbus.

Lydia V. Tinker died Monday in Kirkersville, Ohio, at the age of 102.

She joined the state department, now known as the Ohio Bureau of Employment Services, as a clerk in 1914.

Upon her retirement in 1956, Miss Tinker was credited with the job placement of 600,000 Ohioans.

Two men, generation apart, dream of becoming country music headliners

By WILLIAM McQUEEN
Associated Press Writer

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Leon Douglass and Mark Dalton are a generation apart — but they share a dream.

Both want to become country music headliners, to have their names included with such stars as Johnny Cash, Mel Tillis and Marty Robbins.

They shared the stage Saturday night during the 45th anniversary show of Jamboree U.S.A., the weekly five-hour broadcast on radio station WWVA here.

For the 16-year-old Dalton of Central Clinton, Ill., stardom seems to be within reach. Although singing professionally for less than four years, he already has been a regular on the Mel Tillis Show and has appeared on the Grand Ole Opry and the Dinah Shore Show. He's also been named the Most Promising Male Vocalist of the Midwest by Country People Magazine.

For Douglass, a native of Quad City, Ill., now living in Wheeling, the dream is something that's eluded him for 20 years.

The chase, he says, has included "a lot of hard times, a lot of good times." Unlike Dalton, who travels with his parents, Douglass drives alone to most of his appearances. "I used to have a band," he said, "but expenses eat you up."

And the road is not always easy. "The bad times are not few and far between," Douglass said. "I've had nights when I didn't get paid. When you went home, you didn't have rent."

"One time, I ate crackers and cheese for three days in Miami, Fla." he said.

"I can remember when I couldn't make my car payment. I had to take a damn bus."

At 38, Douglass appears to realize that time may be running out. He said there are thousands like him for every one Robbins or Cash.

"If I could just get that monster record, I could do it," he said, more, it seemed, to reassure himself than the others in the room.

He knows the odds are against him. "Of the 300,000 records released this year, that's a lot of records to get that one."

At times, the chase becomes a bitter one.

"Every guy in the business always thinks they're better than the next guy," Douglass said. "Here I am, bustin' my butt, trying to get a hit record and some dude comes out of nowhere. They just got there before I did."

Douglass quit singing in 1970 because of illness. But he could only stay away a year.

"I may have to drive a truck during the day, but I'll still try to find a club to play in on the weekends."

He added, "You don't care what you're getting paid. You just want someone to like you. You eat it up. Money is not the glory. It's the applause."

Douglass said the dream keeps him going. But he said he wouldn't encourage others to enter the competitive field of country music.

"There are too many people in the business who never make it," he said. "They lose everything they got."

Report presented to county board members*Miami Trace receives passing grade in state evaluation

By RICK WHAITE
Record-Herald Staff Writer

Miami Trace High School received a passing report card from the Ohio Department of Education's evaluation conducted last spring.

High School Principal Curtis E. Fleisher presented the state evaluation to the Fayette County Board of Education members during the regular meeting Wednesday night.

"We recommend that Miami Trace High School be continued as a chartered school," stated the evaluation report, which was conducted by Carl S. Dabney, a state education department supervisor. Dabney's recommendation followed an introductory statement commending the school's administration and staff for their efforts to comply with the Minimum Standards for Ohio High Schools.

Fleisher told the board members the report pinpoints two main areas that need improvement: valid certification of teachers for the subjects their assigned to teach; and the inadequacy of the library facilities for supporting a modern secondary education program.

Fire damages Jeff home

A Jeffersonville home was damaged by fire Wednesday night when an oil stove overheated and ignited in flames.

Fayette County sheriff's deputies reported the blaze began around 9:45 p.m. at Jack Mabra's home, 11 N. Main St. in Jeffersonville.

Jeffersonville firefighters responded to the fire, but no estimate of the damage has been reported.

Mabra was reportedly not at home.

Fetus ruling overturned

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The 9th District Ohio Court of Appeals overturned Wednesday the conviction of Darrell Roper of Akron for attempted murder in the death of his girlfriend's unborn child.

Roper, 22, was convicted June 6 after police charged him with beating his 19-year-old girlfriend Tonya Hill who was six months pregnant. Her baby was stillborn two days later.

The appellate court upheld Roper's conviction for felonious assault and abduction of his girlfriend, but Judge Samuel Bell said in the ruling that under Ohio law it is legally impossible to murder a fetus and therefore impossible to be convicted on an attempted murder charge.

However, Bell urged the state legislature to correct the law. "We are compelled to contrast the legalities of the subject and the horror of the facts before us," Bell said.

Five subject areas were specified where instructors were not properly certified for the assignment. Those were in sociology, psychology, journalism, consumer education and general science. However, School Superintendent Guy M. Foster explained instructors in each of those areas have either now been fully certified or have received temporary certification.

The library facilities were the "thing (Dabney) probably hit the hardest," Fleisher said. The evaluation report stated the school has less than the minimum 80 student station in the reading area; there is no enclosed conference area nor an office workroom; there is no provisions for listening and viewing materials; the school lacks an instructional materials center with adequate storage and maintenance space; and production facilities for instructional materials. "We don't have the room to expand, so we can't do much about these things," Fleisher noted.

Foster added, "The thinking now is that the library is the center of the institution," noting that when the high school was built that way of thinking was not the prevailing school of thought.

The state education department's evaluation did commend Miami Trace High School in a number of other areas, including the additional semester courses in family and community living offered to the Joint Vocational School students; current efforts to improve articulation between the lower grades and high school academic curricula; the counselor-pupil ratio; the integration of testing results and vocational career materials with classroom instruction; research and self study by the school's administration and staff to improve the programs; and excellent community relations.

"I think you'll find in there (the evaluation report) he was basically satisfied," Foster concluded.

Foster informed the board members that beginning next year school districts will be responsible for serving handicapped children between the ages of 5-18 and in the future the age limit will rise to 21. He said the board must file with the state for special education units next year based on the number of handicapped students not served by such units within the school district. The state would then compensate or reimburse the school district for the cost of operating the special education system. Yambor had reported to the board there was "some dissent" among the bus drivers on board policies. He was instructed to study the system and may include citizens, representatives of the bus drivers and transportation experts on the study committee;

—Accepted a request for a leave of absence through March 31 for Walter Hurt, a bus driver who recently underwent minor surgery;

—Accepted the resignation of Jeffersville custodian Richard McDonald who will retire Jan. 1. The board voted to send McDonald a letter of appreciation for his nine years of service. Yambor had described him as the "best custodian in the county."

Local postmaster warns*Christmas gifts should be mailed before Dec. 10 to insure delivery

Washington C.H. Postmaster LaRue L. Horsley today reminded customers that Christmas parcels should be mailed this week to insure pre-Christmas delivery.

Gifts mailed after Dec. 10 should be sent Special Delivery. After Dec. 20, the parcel should be sent first class or Express Mail. Express Mail offers guaranteed next-day delivery to some 900 larger cities throughout the nation.

According to Horsley, customers can be more assured their gifts will arrive in good condition if the following tips are followed:

Two heavy grocery cartons telescoped together to form a single carton provides double walled protection and a secure top and bottom. When two or more gifts are shipped in the same carton they should be cushioned to prevent their coming in contact with each other. Fragile items must be individually cushioned prior to being placed in the carton. Two inches of cushioning material should be placed between the gifts and walls of the carton.

It is recommended that the return and mailing address be placed directly on the carton and that the carton be sealed with heavy glue or filament tape. Sealing tape rather than string tying parcels prevents other cartons from removing the string and allowing the contents to fall out of the box during processing. If an address label is affixed to the carton, make certain it is secured tightly to the carton to prevent its being scuffed off by other parcels during processing. It's a good idea to place scotch tape on all edges of the address label. The address should be boldly printed in letters visible from a distance of two feet.

It is essential that a slip of paper bearing the sender's and recipient's name and address be placed inside the parcel as assurance of delivery or return if the outer address becomes obliterated.

All properly prepared parcels may be insured against loss or damage. The fact insured coverage is not desired does not alter the packaging requirements.

"Our employees have received instructions for proper packaging and told not to accept those that are inadequately packed," Horsley said. "It's better to refuse an inadequately packed parcel than to deliver a damaged Christmas gift to the recipient," he added.

ZIP Code numbers are vital in processing parcels through the Cincinnati parcel post handling center. Parcels without ZIP Code numbers are taken out of the system for ZIP Code look-up service. This adds not less than 24 hours to delivery. ZIP Code numbers may be secured from directories in postal lobbies.

Firm withholding anti-dumping complaints*Armco to cooperate with Carter plan

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Armco Steel Corp. has decided to cooperate with the Carter administration's steel aid plan and hold back new complaints against alleged foreign steel dumping.

"As a mark of our good faith in the administration plan, Armco is withholding additional anti-dumping complaints," Chairman William Verity said Tuesday in a statement issued from the company's Middletown, Ohio, headquarters.

"We are impressed and pleased by this administration's determination to seek solutions for the many problems which face our steel industry," he added.

Armco, the nation's fifth-biggest steelmaker, filed a complaint with the Treasury Department last week against the United Kingdom. The complaint charged British producers with dumping five major carbon steel products in the U.S.

Dumping is the practice of selling products in foreign markets for less than the cost of production or below home prices. It is illegal under U.S. trade laws.

The Carter steel plan would speed up the handling of anti-dumping complaints through a new price monitoring system using "reference prices" to trigger government action against unfairly traded imports.

"The fast-track anti-dumping formula is an innovative approach to restraining unfair trade by foreign steelmakers without permanent damage to international trade," said Verity, whose company is the first to announce its willingness to withhold the dumping complaints.

Treasury Undersecretary Anthony Solomon said Tuesday that reference prices would be announced by the end of December, and that the plan could become effective by February 1.

However, the industry would have to agree to withdraw existing anti-dumping complaints and refrain from filing new ones in order to make the plan work, Solomon said.

Some steel producers have hinted they may not abide by that part of the program.

The producers began actively pressing for anti-dumping relief this fall when President Carter told a White House meeting the nation's trade laws would be vigorously enforced.

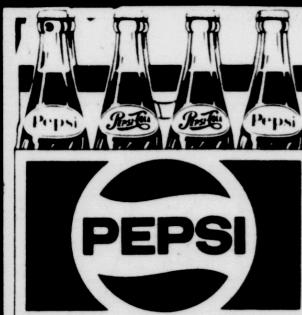

Imports, which have captured about 20 percent of the domestic market in 1977, have been blamed for record losses, mass layoffs and plant closings.

The new plan would set reference prices based on production costs of the Japanese, considered the world's most efficient steelmakers.

Arguments and fears linger

Religious groups eye financial disclosures

EDITOR'S NOTE: Americans gave nearly $30 billion to charity last year. The biggest chunk of the money went to religious groups. And these organizations are under growing pressure to give donors more information about the way contributions are spent. Here, in the first of a five-part series, is a look at the move toward financial disclosure by charities.

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer

Representatives of the nation's top evangelical associations are meeting in Chicago later this week to talk about money and to try to decide how much they should tell the public about the way contributions are spent.

The religious charities traditionally have been the strongest opponents of efforts to force non-profit organizations to disclose information about their financial operations. Some spokesmen contend that legislation on financial disclosure would be a violation of the principle of separation of church and state.

The arguments and the fears remain. But a growing number of religious leaders say they must set up a voluntary system for financial disclosure to avoid a mandatory one.

In a recent meeting in Washington, D.C., Roman Catholic bishops approved strict new standards governing fund raising in the church. The standards, intended for use by all Catholic dioceses and religious orders in the United States, require full accountability to contributors, with regular, audited reports setting forth the amounts collected, the costs of the fund raising and the purposes and uses of the money.

The evangelical leaders — about three dozen of them — were invited to Chicago by W. Stanley Mooneyham, president of World Vision, which a spokesman describes as "a non-profit, interdenominational outreach of Christians concerned with the physical and spiritual needs of people around the world."

World Vision has been one of the few religious groups which has always been willing to provide financial information to donors who asked.

In July, officials of World Vision and about half a dozen other religious charities met in the office of U.S. Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., who is a member of the World Vision board.

Among the subjects under discussion was a bill proposed by U.S. Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., which would require most major charities to provide a breakdown of where and how their money is spent.

Speaking in support of his bill, Wilson said it represented "a golden opportunity to take a positive step that will insure that the vital work done by legitimate charitable organizations can be continued in the future in an environment that is not tainted by frequent scandal."

At about the same time as Wilson was speaking, Hatfield was talking to the religious leaders. Richard L. Watson, director of communications for World Vision, said Hatfield told them: "If Christian agencies don't take the bull by the horns and come up with some kind of organization of their own that voluntarily provides information, then Congress is going to do it..."

"We agreed with Sen. Hatfield ... We felt Christian agencies ought to do something voluntarily."

Watson said World Vision supports the idea of financial disclosure, but is opposed to making it mandatory.

There had been pressure for financial disclosure from other sources as well. Published reports said that the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association was not in compliance with a Minnesota law requiring registration and annual reports on annuity plans sold in the state. The problem — which Graham blamed on postal and other errors — was cleared up, and the association subsequently provided, for the first time, a full, public breakdown of its spending.

The issue of financial disclosure is not a new one. Religious organizations in particular have come under attack ever since the scandal within the Pallottine Fathers of Baltimore, a Roman Catholic order, which raised $20 million in a two-year period, but spent less than 5 percent of the funds on charitable purposes.

Some states already limit the amount charities can spend on fund raising. Others require charities to include a financial statement along with appeals.

The light side

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Police are searching for a thief who took 248 pillows from a truck parked in north Omaha.

The thief broke a lock off a semi-trailer truck on Wednesday and got away with 12 cases of bedroom pillows. Police said they were worth $315.

EAST GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP)

The mayor and commissioners of East Grand Rapids are drawing the same salaries as their predecessors for 50 years back. But things may change. A charter adopted in 1927, when East Grand Rapids became a city, set the top salary for mayor and commissioners at $360 a year. The pay for the part-time positions never changed.

Now a commission has proposed boosting the mayor's pay to as high as $750 a year, and commissioners could draw a maximum of $500.

The raises would take effect next month unless commissioners disagree — and one commissioner does. He wants the commission to vote on the question Dec. 19.

verification of Save the Children credentials?" The section says that 78.1 per cent of the organization's money is used for direct aid and support of the charity itself. An annual report and audit statement are available on request.

World Vision tells contributors: "Over the past three years, World Vision invested more than $43.9 million on its ministries while total overhead has averaged 17.1 percent." A complete financial report is sent to anyone who requests it.

Like other charities, religious organizations are covered by a portion of the Internal Revenue Service code which provides tax-exempt status to "corporations or any community chest fund or foundation organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, testing for public safety, literary or educational purposes or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals."

Under the code, none of the net earnings of the group can go to any private shareholder or individual. Tax-exempt groups also are prohibited from "carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation."

There are some 250,000 tax-exempt organizations in the United States. Most of them are required to file financial reports with the IRS. Because of constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state, however, any religious group which qualifies under IRS rules as an "integrated auxiliary of a church" does not have to file such a report.

(Note: some religious charities may provide financial reports on individual arms of their operations which do not meet IRS requirements for the exemption from filing.)

It is these religious groups, however, which raise the most money. The American Association of Fund-Raising Counsel Inc. says Americans gave a record $29.42 billion to charity in 1976, up 9.4 percent from 1975. Religious groups got 43.6 percent or $12.84 billion.

up 9.9 percent from the previous year.

The Treasury Department estimates that deductions taken by individual taxpayers for charitable contributions in 1976 cost the federal government about $4 billion in lost taxes.

Billy Graham has noted in the past that churches and church-related groups are not required to provide financial information. "But the mood of the country is moving in that direction," he added, and "we will gladly conform to it."

Graham also said: "When people give to our association they trust that it's being handled properly and wisely and invested for the advancement of the Kingdom of God, which all of us."

Helen O'Rourke, director of the Philanthropic Advisory Service of the Council of Better Business Bureaus, agreed that many contributors accept, on faith, that their money will be spent wisely.

Mrs. O'Rourke said the organization got several critical letters after it was disclosed that the BBB listed the Graham association as failing to comply with council standards.

The council keeps files on about 10,000 charities. It regularly publishes a brochure called "Give, But Give Wisely," listing about 500 charities which are broken down into two groups — those which comply with BBB standards and those which don't. Among the standards is a requirement that the organization provide an independent financial audit and that it spend at least 50 percent of its money on program purposes.

Most of the organizations which are not in compliance are religious in nature. As of late last year, Mrs. O'Rourke said less than 10 percent of the religious-based organizations had provided an independent financial statement. (World Vision is in compliance; the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association is not, although officials have said they will provide the financial information required to change the group's status.)

Why are they so uncooperative? "It's not a matter of being uncooperative," said Mrs. O'Rourke. "They seem to think that we have no right to ask them the question." She said some religious-backed organizations "feel like they only have to answer to God."

World Vision's Watson said he expects a specific course of action to come out of the Chicago meeting. He also said that financial disclosure has helped rather than hurt the charity. "The more we tell people, the more confidence they are having in World Vision," he said.

KNOW ALL THE FISHER FEATURES

1. The Fisher Stove heats between 1,000 and 3,000 + square feet for less than $1.00 a day, depending on insulation, design of building, and stove model.
2. Holds a fire overnight; no need to restart.
3. Burns wood and coal (grate not needed with wood).
4. Virtually smokeless when properly installed and operated.
5. It's a wood and cook stove and—in the larger models—a fireplace as well.
6. Unique Fisher two-step design provides a secondary combustion chamber which promotes almost total combustion with minimal ash residue.
7. Flue extends into firebox, concentrating heat in center of stove, which means the heat is distributed evenly. Very little heat is lost up the chimney.
8. Massive, all-welded, 1/4" steel construction means superior heat retention and radiation.
9. Heavy, triple-seal cast-iron doors. Right- and left-hand doors available.
10. Gravity door lock prevents accidental opening.
11. Firebox, lined with firebrick on bottom and sides, prevents burnout.
12. Unique, patented "spin" draft control knobs allow you to "fine tune" burning rate to a very efficient burning minimum. Knobs stay cool during operation.
13. Two-level, 5/16"-thick steel top provides two cooking surfaces and two cooking temperatures.
14. Easily installed as a freestanding unit or adaptable for a fireplace conversion.

Typographical errors in speeches attacked

By FRANK CORMIER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter sometimes corrects grammar and spelling in memos submitted by underlings. Maybe he should turn his attention to their speech texts.

The office of Robert Lipshutz, White House counsel, once handed reporters a text in which Lipshutz reported that leaders of the developing nations are busy "irradicating illiteracy." That's not a typographical error, or errors. At least, not here.

Lipshutz also was quoted as using the following ungrammatical phrase: "out of respect of the inherent dignity and man and woman."

Dr. Peter Bourne, the president's special assistant for health issues, is a learned man. But someone, presumably a speechwriter, recently had him spelling minuscule as minuscule.

During the campaign, Carter himself earned a reputation for precise use of words. He is not infallible, of course.

For example, Carter likes to talk about the "enormity" of the energy problem. The preferred definitions of the word in Webster's New World Dictionary are "great wickedness" and "a monstrous or outrageous act; very wicked crime."

Carter presumably uses the word as a reference to "enormous size or extent; vastness." But the dictionary says this is "generally considered a loose usage."

In the first months of the Carter administration, foreign policy adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski kept himself so far out of the public eye that he was rumored to be reluctant to appear on television talk shows or otherwise make bids for personal publicity.

More recently, the president's Polish-born assistant for national security affairs has appeared on ABC's "Issues and Answers" and held a series of briefings for White House reporters, two of them on the record. He has not appeared a bit bashful.

That brings to mind former President Nixon's German-born assistant for national security affairs. Henry A. Kissinger also stayed in the background as a White House newcomer, but not for long.

Should Brzezinski decide to "go public" on a grander scale, he can call on staff advisers experienced in the realm of journalism and public relations.

For the first time, Brzezinski and the National Security Council staff he heads have their own professional spokesman. He is Jerry Schechter, former diplomatic editor of Time magazine, whose title is associate press secretary.

In addition, Brzezinski recently borrowed Fred Shaver, former U.S. Embassy spokesman in Venezuela, from the U.S. Information Agency. Shaver is expected to return to USIA soon, and it is not yet clear whether he will be replaced.

AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Medved and David Wallechinsky may be the recipients of the best deal in television — they got $200,000 for the title of their book "What Really Happened to the Class of '65."

The NBC series based on that title premiered today at 10 p.m. EST.

Their book documented the lives of 30 of their fellow graduates of Pacific Palisades High School, dubbed the "Golden Class" by Time magazine in 1965.

Universal Studios bought the book with the intention of turning it into a feature motion picture. But the movie was abandoned and NBC put it on its fall schedule as an anthology series.

NBC's original plan was to take the stories directly from the book, but executive producer Richard Irving said, "All of the stories were downers. These were kids caught up in the world of the '60s, the protests, the drug culture, the breakdown of morality."

"The network did not think there would be an audience for that kind of thing."

NBC pulled the series off its fall schedule and sent it back to Universal for retooling. The result is that all the real stories were dropped and NBC opted for an anthology series based on types.

For instance, what ever happened to the class clown, the class beauty, the class he-man, the class hustler, the valedictorian, and so on. The stories are all fictional and are not from the book.

Irving said, "The drama we feel is that their stories are told against the canvas of the turbulence of the 1960s. We chose to take the positive side, the inspirational side. We don't run away from the tragedies, but we want to end on a hopeful note."

Tonight's premiere show is about what ever happened to the most promiscuous girl in the senior class. In the book she continued to be promiscuous after graduation, but on TV she moves away, meets a man unaware of her reputation and lives happily ever after.

Well, at least until an old classmate shows up and tries to renew their past relationship. It turns out she has been suppressing her yen to roam all the while, and it drives her toward a mental breakdown.

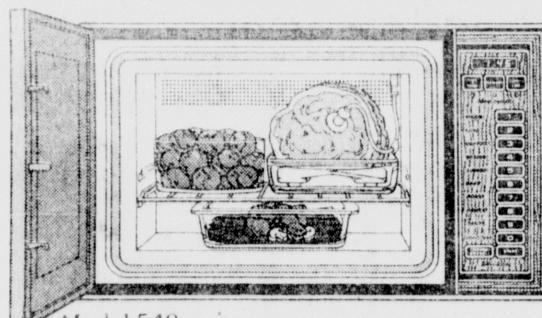

Annette O'Toole stars as the young woman and Tim Matteson is her husband. Miss O'Toole is most appealing and effective in the anguished role.

It all ends happily, of course. On the whole it's not a bad show. In fact, it's pretty good. The ending is a little contrived, but the TV audience has shown again and again that it shuns depressing shows. So in view of the rating battle NBC is in with ABC and CBS, who can blame them.

Airport terminal after midnight can be ghostly to candidate

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — There may be places more depressing than an airport terminal long after midnight: vast, empty, echoing, a place to depart or to arrive, but not to be.

Behind unattended ticket counters, the displaced traveler can read a gazetteer of cities that can't be reached at this hour.

Maybe later.

That roster of American places must stir a special pang for the man who is running for president, trying to reach every one of those cities and a thousand more.

For him, this ghostly airport is even more depressing, for while he waits here for a tardy campaign aide assigned to drive him to still another motel, the candidate can only ponder all the places he cannot reach, all the people he cannot hope to persuade.

Of this there can be no more compelling evidence than the fact that one night, long ago, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey was just such a political traveler, stranded in the quiet cavern of Miami International Airport. That was in 1972, in his last real quest for the White House, and he was campaigning for a Florida presidential primary he would lose to George C. Wallace.

His charter flight arrived early, his driver arrived late, and there was nothing to do but pace the hard, echoing floor.

"Damn," he snapped at the emptiness, and talked of the rigors of running, questioned whether it was worth the effort, whether a man really had to endure nights like that in order to lead.

Humphrey endured them, along with taunts and slights that might have soured a lesser man. He has spent a generation and more demonstrating that a politician does not have to be president in order to lead.

In these days of his last illness, under treatment for inoperable cancer, there is praise, eulogy, celebration of a career that spanned decades of change. It has stretched from the New Deal to Jimmy Carter, has seen him strive, and lose, in three major quests for the presidency, a hope that still glimmered even after Carter had taken command of the Democratic Party in 1976.

And Humphrey has had at least as much to do with the major changes of his times as have the men who bested him in presidential contest.

The building that houses the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has been named for him. About $5 million of a $20 million quota has been raised to endow the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota.

About 2,500 people, Carter among them, were at a $1,000-a-plate dinner for that cause last Friday night. Now there is to be a nationwide campaign for mailed contributions to the institute.

But in these bittersweet observances, there is something awry. It begins to sound as though they celebrate some philosopher-politician more at home in the coister than in the arena.

That's not Hubert Humphrey. For all the travail, he relished the fight.

It is an easy gesture for President Carter to say now that the desk in the Oval Office should once have belonged to Humphrey.

"I've called him on the phone when I was in trouble," Carter said. "I've gotten his quiet and private and sound advice."

But back in the arena, in the campaign spring of 1976, when Humphrey loomed as a threat to Carter's march to the Democratic presidential nomination, there was no such sentiment. Carter said then that Humphrey, at 64, was too old to be president — and besides, he was a loser.

Louisville downs Michigan

William & Mary stuns No. 2 North Carolina

By The Associated Press

It's not often anybody mentions William & Mary's basketball team in the same breath with North Carolina, but the Indians are certainly on equal footing with the Tar Heels today.

In fact, they're a step ahead of them.

William & Mary pulled off the upset of the young college season Wednesday night with a 78-75 victory over the nation's second-ranked team, the Coach Bruce Parkhill indulged himself with the inevitable superlatives.

"It was a great, great win for us," said the William & Mary coach. "I think we maintained the tempo of the game throughout. UNC is a heck of a ball team, but right now I just can't find words to describe how I feel about our squad."

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith was kind enough to throw some superlatives of his own: William & Mary's way.

"They played a great, great basketball game," he said.

Elsewhere in college basketball,

third-ranked Notre Dame walloped

Northwestern 88-48; No. 16 Louisville defeated No. 9 Michigan 88-85; No. 12

Maryland tripped East Carolina 130-106; 15th-ranked Holy Cross whipped Iona 105-83; 18th-ranked Syracuse trounced Colgate 99-50 and No. 19 Kansas blasted Fairleigh Dickinson 88-54.

John Lowenhaupt's 21 points led William & Mary's upset of North Carolina. The surprising Indians took a 32-31 lead at halftime and steadily built it until the Tar Heels made a belated comeback behind Phil Ford, who scored 24 points in the game.

The Indians came close to losing their lead late in the game by missing the front end of two one-on-one free-throw situations. With 31 seconds left, North Carolina's Mike O'Koren hit on two to make it 71-70. Put then free throws by Bobby Boyd and Billy Harrington moved the Indians ahead 76-71 and the Tar Heels couldn't come back.

Dick Williams scored 23 points as Notre Dame held Northwestern scoreless for the first seven minutes and romped over the outclassed Big Ten team.

Rick Wilson stole the ball from Paul Heuerman and scored on a layup with 26 seconds left, then iced the game with two free throws with six seconds remaining as Louisville beat Michigan. Wilson had 26 points to lead the Cardinals before a capacity crowd of 13,600 at Crisler Arena in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Greg Manning scored 20 points, leading eight players in double figures as Maryland defeated East Carolina in a school record performance. The Terps' point total broke the mark of 127, set against East Carolina and Catholic High School.

Ronnie Perry scored a game-high 29 points to lead Holy Cross past Iona.

Dale Shackleford and Marty Byrnes combined for 30 points as Syracuse's well balanced attack buried Colgate. Danell Valentine scored 19 points to lead Kansas over Fairleigh Dickinson.

In other Games, Texas beat Oklahoma State 108-87 as Jim Kriavics scored 42 points; Jim Graziano's 24 points led South Carolina over Baptist College of Charleston 107-75; Georgetown walloped Wagner 96-65 as Rich Jackson scored 16 second-half points; George Washington defeated Wisconsin 77-74 behind Tom Glenn's 20 points.

'Establishes confidence' — Cunningham

Philadelphia snaps Blazer dominance with 22-point win

By The Associated Press

They all counted the same in the standings, but the fact remains that some games are more important than others.

That was the case in Philadelphia Wednesday night, when the 76ers whopped the Portland Trail Blazers 122-100.

"This establishes our confidence; we now know we can beat Portland," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, whose club had lost five in a row to the Blazers, including four straight in the National Basketball Association playoffs last spring.

"This has got to be our best game of the season without a doubt," added Cunningham, who replaced Gene Shue when the Sixers were 2-4 and has seen the club go on a 15-2 tear.

"We dominated the defensive boards, and our fast break was awesome in the middle of the third period."

That's when the Sixers broke the game open, scoring 16 points in a row to erase a 76-71 deficit and go ahead to stay.

The loss snapped a club-record eight-game winning streak for Portland whose 18-4 record leads the league.

In other NBA games Wednesday night, the Boston Celtics edged the Kansas City Kings 113-109, the Washington Bullets trounced the Cleveland Cavaliers 96-95, the Phoenix Suns beat the Detroit Pistons 113-107 in overtime, the San Antonio Spurs defeated the New Jersey Nets 125-122 in overtime, the Indiana Pacers topped the New Orleans Jazz 118-103 and the Denver Nuggets beat the Atlanta Hawks 123-116.

George McGinnis led the Sixers with 24 points and Julius Erving added 22. Portland got 27 points from forward Maurice Lucas and 25 from center Bill Walton, but nobody scored more than 10.

Celtics 113, Kings 109

The slumping Celtics snapped a three-game losing streak behind Dave Cowens and John Havlicek. Cowens had 28 points and 16 rebounds and Havlicek added 25 points, including eight in the fourth quarter.

Bullets 96, Cavaliers 95

Kevin Grevey's three-point play with 25 seconds remaining gave Washington its victory. Grevey, who scored 19 points, sank a 12-foot bank shot and added a free throw to break a 93-93 tie.

Suns 113, Pistons 107 OT

Detroit blew a 15-point lead with 7:54 to go in regulation, rookie Walter Davis tying it for Phoenix with a short jumper with one second left. Alvan Adams' basket with 1:40 to go in overtime snapped a 105-105 tie and put Phoenix ahead to stay.

Davis and Paul Westphal scored 27 points each and Adams had 26 for Phoenix.

Spurs 125, Nets 112

George Gervin was held scoreless in the first period but got 38 in the next three as San Antonio sent the Nets to their fifth straight loss and dropped their record to 3-21, worst in the NBA.

Pacers 118, Jazz 103

John Williamson led the way with 26 points for the Pacers, who won without high-scoring Adrian Dantley, sitting out a one-game suspension for an altercation with Milwaukee's Dave Meyers.

Nuggets 123, Hawks 116

Dan Issel scored a season-high 34 points as the Nuggets raised their home-court record to 12-0. David Thompson added 32 points and Bobby Jones 24.

Zechman named to head South all-star team

Schlichter, Hanners named to team

By MARK REA

Record-Herald Sports Editor
On May 11, 1973, Miami Trace High School announced they had hired a new football head coach to replace Fred Bernier, who resigned following the 1972 season to accept the head coaching job at Covington (Ky.) Catholic High School.

The new head coach was a young man from Youngstown named Fred Zechman. Although the question, "Fred Who?" came up often in 1972, no one is questioning the Panthers now.

Zechman has taken the Miami Trace football program and, in five short years, has built one of the strongest foundations in the state of Ohio. Zechman's accomplishments have been recognized and he will be the head coach for the Southern Ohio all-stars in the annual North-South All-Star Game, to be held in Canton on Friday, Aug. 4, 1978.

"It's a tremendous honor," said Zechman. "A lot of top coaches have had the job and it's one of the things you can receive as a coach that you really look forward to."

"As far as the game goes, it's one of the fun things in coaching. All-star games are usually fun. And, since this is the first time Trace has had representatives in the game, I'm glad to be going," he stated.

Art Schlichter and Bill Hanners will appear in the game as South all-stars, an honor that recognizes the best high school seniors in Ohio.

Schlichter and Hanners are the Panthers' first representatives to the game in the school's history and Zechman is the first coach from Fayette County ever to be named the head coach.

In 1973, former Washington C.H. head coach Maurice Pfeifer was named as an assistant coach for the South all-stars.

Zechman will be joined on the staff by assistants Tom Ruttan of Worthington, Ken Hockman of Loveland Hurst and Joel Cockley from Buckeye North.

Zechman came to Fayette County from Youngstown where he had been head coach at Western Reserve High School in Berlin Center. He graduated from Sylvania High School, Sylvania, Ohio, and received a bachelor of science degree from Capital University.

He also has work on his master's degree at Miami University and Youngstown University.

The 32-year-old Zechman was pleased with the honor and then turned his comments to next year's football squad.

"Any time you lose the top quarterback in the country, and 12 all-district players, you're going to have problems," he said. "But, I think we've got the guys who can jump right in and do the job just as well."

Schlichter's heir to the signal-calling throne is Scott Grooms. "He will come into his own," Zechman pointed out. "We'll surely miss Art but I have no doubts that Scott will do the job."

"Although we're losing (Dennis) Combs and (David) Creamer from the backfield, we have about seven underclassmen to fill in. We might run backs in and out like we did two years ago. We've had good back-ups this season — people who filled in well late in the game or when a first team player got hurt."

"We had a tough reserve schedule for just that purpose. We had Lancaster's reserves and Logan on the schedule so that we could get good game experience. Both were undefeated before we played them."

"The biggest problem could be the line. With only starter back, it has to be a problem. But, again, we have the guys who jumped in last season and did the job when they had to. Now they can settle down knowing they have the job and can work on their playing time," Zechman continued. He emphasized the role of Glen Cobb, who will be the only returning starter, as the leader on both the offensive and defensive lines.

Zechman also reported two new opponents for the Panthers next year. Hamilton Taft will replace Lancaster on the schedule and Lebanon, a Class AAA power that allowed just two touchdowns all of last season, will replace Jackson.

Commission a little disappointed

No baseball bombshells on Pearl Harbor Day

HONOLULU — Although it was Pearl Harbor Day yesterday, there was not even a whimper of noise on baseball's trading front Wednesday. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn expressed disappointment over the lack of deals at the annual winter meetings.

Since the meetings began last Sunday, only four deals have been made, and only one of them — the trade which sent outfielder Bobby Bonds to the Chicago White Sox — could be termed as a major one.

"I'm disappointed there hasn't been more trade activity," said Kuhn. "I had expected to see more. But with more long-term player contracts, there is just less trading. It's much more difficult to trade nowadays."

"Also, the re-entry draft system has provided teams a chance to strengthen themselves without giving up anything. That has been a factor in slowing down trade activity. But, I still think we'll see some trades before the week is out."

In other matters, Kuhn said a proposal to discuss the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Area situation had been removed from the docket by the Giants. The Giants originally had placed the proposal on the agenda but had nothing solid to report and so decided not to waste the time of the other teams.

"I would have preferred to talk about it if something concrete had been put before us," said Kuhn. "But I think it would be a waste of time if they had nothing to tell us. I think the Bay Area situation is a serious problem and should be resolved. I think we made a mistake in 1968 when we put another club in the Bay Area. It's just too much baseball for the Bay."

Another matter — resolving the Boston Red Sox transfer of ownership — is expected to come up for review

Messersmith sold to New York

HONOLULU (AP) — Andy Messersmith, the pitcher who smashed baseball's lifetime hold on a player's contract, then spurned a rich offer from the New York Yankees, has been sold to the world champions for one-tenth of what he would have cost them three years ago.

The 32-year-old Messersmith was sold by the Atlanta Braves to the Yankees Wednesday night for $100,000, pending the pitcher's approval. Atlanta owner Ted Turner said, however, the approval was a mere formality.

In other late trade action, Baltimore acquired pitchers Dan Stanhouse and Joe Kerrigan, plus outfielder Gary Roenicke from the Expos for veteran left-hander Rudy May, right-handed reliever Randy Miller and minor league right-hander Bryan Smith. Smith was shifted from Rochester to Denver.

before the American League owners on Thursday. The group interested in buying the Red Sox has recently switched finance companies in an effort to make a stronger presentation to the AL owners.

A proposal to expand the post-season playoffs from a best-of-five series to a best-of-seven competition also will be presented before the major league owners but the commissioner doubted any vote would be taken on the matter.

The major leagues are also looking to the prospect of getting a working agreement with the cable television industry. Some cities, such as Philadelphia, Atlanta and New York, already have cable TV, but the commissioner is more interested in getting all of major league baseball involved in a revenue-sharing project.

As far as the trading front is concerned, the latest scuttlebutt was that the Philadelphia Phillies and Baltimore Orioles were working on a deal which would send reliever Gene Garber and outfielder Jerry Martin to the Orioles for left-handed pitcher Rudy May and right-handed hitter Lee May.

If the Phillies succeed in making that deal, it would free them to trade Richie Hebner — possibly to the Mets.

The Red Sox also were said to be dickering with the Angels for second baseman Jerry Remy.

Trophy ceremony goes commercial

Campbell expected to receive Heisman

NEW YORK (AP) - Earl Campbell, the University of Texas' 220-pound bruising runner, is expected to become (1) the Heisman Trophy winner and (2) a television personality tonight when college football's most prestigious award is presented in an hour-long TV special (CBS), 10 p.m. EST.

Since Jay Bernwanger of the University of Chicago won the first Heisman Trophy in 1935, the 13½ inch-high statue of a running back has gone to a runner or a quarterback every year but two.

'Young Lionesses' ready to challenge

Larry Kelly of Yale in 1936 and Leon Hart of Notre Dame in 1949, were the only "outsiders" to capture the award. Both were two-way ends. No interior lineman has ever won the Heisman.

One thing is certain this year — the winner won't be a quarterback. To provide some suspense and drama, the Downtown Athletic Club of New York, which sponsors the Heisman, has created six new trophies known as the DAC Awards.

The top three finishers in each category — offensive end, offensive lineman, running back, defensive lineman, linebacker, defensive back — have been invited to attend tonight's $65-a-plate black-tie banquet at the New York Hilton Hotel.

The accounting firm of Harris, Kerr, Forster & Co., which tabulated the ballots of some 1,050 members of the media from coast to coast, announced that the top three Heisman finishers are among the invitees. And since the six DAC categories failed to include a quarterback . . .

Here are the top three finishers in each of the six new categories, listed alphabetically:

Offensive end — Wes Chandler, Florida; Ken MacAfee, Notre Dame; Ozzie Newsome, Alabama.

Offensive lineman — Mark Donahue, Michigan; MacAfee again; Chris Ward, Ohio State.

Running backs — Charles Alexander, Louisiana State; Campbell; Terry Miller, Oklahoma State.

Defensive linemen — Ross Browner, Notre Dame; Brad Shearer, Texas; Art Still, Kentucky.

Linebackers — Tom Cousineau, Ohio State; Jerry Robinson, UCLA; Gary Spani, Kansas State.

Defensive backs — Luther Bradley, Notre Dame; Zac Henderson, Oklahoma; Dennis Thurman, Southern California.

After the six new DAC Awards, interspersed with entertainment by such stars as Connie Stevens, Leslie Uggams and Elliott Gould, there will may still be time for the Heisman winner to be announced.

After all, the show is being produced by the CBS entertainment department, not CBS Sports. CBS reportedly shelled out $164,000 to the DAC and $36,000 to Trans World International, a firm that specializes in packaging shows for the networks.

Campbell's closest Heisman challengers are expected to be Oklahoma State running back Terry Miller and Notre Dame tight end Ken MacAfee.

Flames edge

Crusaders, 71-67

The Gregg Street Flames upped their record to 3-0 Tuesday night with a 71-67 victory over the Circleville Bible College Crusaders. The Flames, playing their first game on the road, jumped to a 14-point lead at halftime.

Jack Redman led the scoring with 21 points, 14 of them in the first half. Tim Wilson and Bruce Cupp each scored 17 tallies while Frank Dunn scored 10 points.

Mike Holbrook paced the Crusaders with 20 points.

The Flames will be back in action tonight, hosting Beavercreek Nazarene at the Fellowship Hall gym. Game time is 7 p.m.

FLAMES (71) — Dunn 5-0-10; Redman 7-7-21; Snively 3-0-6; Wilson 8-0-17; Cupp 8-1-17; Gillette 0-0-0; Sowers 0-0-0; Total 31-9-71.

CRUSADERS (67) — Holbrook 8-4-20; Hollingsworth 0-0-0; Thompson 4-0-8; Zile 0-0-0; Leach 0-0-0; G. Benner 7-3-17; B. Benner 0-0-0; Palmer 0-0-0; Barkhurst 6-0-12; McGuire 5-0-10; Total 30-7-67.

Hillsboro drops third straight

HILLSBORO, Ohio — Faltering with a 10-point fourth quarter, Hillsboro dropped their third straight game this season to Leesburg Fairfield, 79-71.

The Indians, now 0-3 in the young season, led at halftime, 41-40 and after three periods, 61-59. But, a disastrous 10-point finale doomed the Indians.

Gary Schraw paced Hillsboro with 18 points while Mike Gilliland tossed in 16 points and Jon Cole tallied 14 while saddled with personal fouls the entire evening. Duke Jackson also scored 10 for the Indians.

Bruce Morris led Fairfield with 26 points while Barry Turner put away 19 and Tim Priest scored 15, seven from the free throw line.

The Indians will be in action again tomorrow night as they travel to Wilmington to meet the Hurricane.

Leesburg also took last night's reserve contest, 58-50. Fairfield's Ron Woods led all scorers with 31 points.

The bidding:

Opening lead - king of spades.

Sylvia had only the foggiest notion of what constituted a finesse when she first started to play at the club. Of course, there were numerous other areas where Sylvia was equally deficient — to put it mildly — but that did not stop her from always playing in the expert game.

You can judge for yourself how Sylvia bid and played in those days by studying this deal. She was South, and, in her view, five diamonds was obviously the right bid to make with her hand. She had a good hand and saw no reason at all to bid less than game. She barely took notice of the unusually fine dummy that came down, considering it to be no more than her due.

West cashed two spade tricks and shifted to the ten of hearts. Sylvia won with the ace and promptly led the queen of clubs. She remembered having heard of a play called a finesse, and she reasoned that if West had the king her queen would win the trick, as she intended to follow low from dummy.

But West covered the queen with the king and Sylvia won the trick in dummy with the ace. Undismayed by this setback, she cashed all six of her trumps, retaining only the K-Q-6 of hearts in dummy. On the last trump lead, East, now reduced to the J-8-7 of hearts and jack of clubs, had to find a discard.

He could not spare a heart, so he discarded the jack of clubs. Sylvia was by no means sure that her eight of clubs was high, but she led it anyway — and in that way made the contract. She had unwittingly executed one of the rarest and most difficult plays in bridge — the transfer squeeze.

Arthritis and Rheumatism

The confusion about arthritis, rheumatism, rheumatoid arthritis and osteoarthritis is evident in the letters I receive from readers.

It is not surprising because the classification of arthritis and related disorders made by The American Rheumatism Association lists about one hundred variations, each of which has its own signs, symptoms and characteristics.

Arthritis and rheumatism are often wrongly substituted for each other. Arthritis is an inflammation, infection or change in any joint of the body.

Rheumatism is a vague term used to describe aches and pains and stiffness of the muscles, with or without involvement of the joints.

The two major classifications of arthritis are rheumatoid arthritis and osteoarthritis. Rheumatoid arthritis is a chronic inflammation of the joints and the tissues around it. It occurs more frequently in women than in men and can begin to show evidence before 35. Even today, the exact cause is unknown. Although not all physicians agree with the concept of a "focus of infection" this is still considered a possibility.

Infections of the kidneys, the prostate, the gall bladder, the tonsils, the teeth and the sinuses are thought by some doctors to be the possible reason for the onset of rheumatoid arthritis. The symptoms of pain, swelling, tenderness of the joints in the fingers, the wrists, the knees, the feet, the ankles and the elbows characterize this form of arthritis.

Most sufferers are particularly distressed with the stiffness that occurs when they arise or after long periods of inactivity.

It is not surprising that mental depression and fatigue frequently accompany this and other forms of arthritis. Many complicated tests are available to establish the exact diagnosis.

Osteoarthritis, the cause of which is also unknown, is a chronic non-inflammatory disorder that involves the bones and the joints. Chiefly, this division affects the elderly, the obese and those who may have been subjected in their occupations to repeated injuries. Unlike rheumatoid arthritis, the pain of muscle spasms are more pronounced after moving about.

By detailed history of the onset of the signs and symptoms of both conditions, and by the highly refined blood studies that are now available, the physician can distinguish between these two closely related, yet individualized, forms of arthritis.

COUNTRY COUSINS 4-H

Yearly books and folders purchased by the club treasury were passed out by the vice president, Christina Vernon. Advisors gave the members the wrapping paper which the club is selling. Members that sell the most receive candies.

President Joan McCoy opened the meeting and Lona Fridley led the pledges. Debbie Knecht read a poem, "Be at Peace," for her devotions. Secretary Carmen West called roll and read the minutes of the last meeting. Carol Deere gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. Cunningham reminded the club that dues should be paid by the next meeting. Becky Knecht gave the health report entitled, "Grooming." Lona Fridley's safety report was on camping.

Under old business, a letter was read thanking the group for the Halloween Party at the Deanview Nursing Home. Members were reminded to know what project they are taking by the January meeting.

Cynthia Cunningham, Joanie McCoy and Sandy Lewis gave a demonstration on manners. The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served by Lona Fridley and Carol Deere.

The light side

TAYLORSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — The incumbents strolled to victory again in this town where the election ballot has blanks for mayor and aldermen, "and people just write in who they want."

Major Edwin Rhodes got 33 of the 56 votes cast, which included three for his brother, Mell. Alderman Robert Harris topped the vote-gatherers with 40 and Alderman Harvey Woods received 37 votes.

"We don't run for office," explained Woods. "In the town, everybody knows everybody and everyone seems to know who might accept the job and who they want to do it."

All three incumbents have served several unpaid terms in office in this north Georgia town of about 180 residents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Bosses, and former bosses, are the brunts of a lot of jokes. And it's no different when former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger wisecracks about his ex-boss, former President Gerald Ford.

Kissinger, who presented Ford with the Charles Evans Hughes Award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews on Tuesday night, said that President Carter has dealt in such details as which staffers can use the White House swimming pool and tennis courts.

But, Kissinger quipped: "When Gerald Ford was president, I could swim in the pool whenever I wanted. President Ford gave me trouble only when I wanted to walk on the water."

Nor was Ford's wife, Betty, spared. Kissinger said her narration of an upcoming ballet program on television might be considered political, "considering the present occupant of the White House."

The baller is a production of "The Nutcracker."

Icy streets blamed

Local driver slightly hurt in auto mishap

A local woman suffered minor injuries when her car slid into the rear of another car Wednesday in front of 921 S. Main St.

Lulu Tipton, 36, 103 W. Ohio Ave., took herself to Fayette County Memorial Hospital where she was reportedly treated for contusions. She was later released.

Ms. Tipton was injured when another vehicle, driven by Alvy J. Brown, 1224 Nelson Place, slid across her path from an intersecting alleyway along S. Main Street, according to a Washington C.H. Police Department report.

Police officers stated the woman applied her brakes, which caused the car to slide on the icy street into the rear of a parked car. The accident occurred around 12:03 p.m.

The parked car belonged to Charles Happeny of 415 Cherry St. Both the Tipton and Happeny vehicles were moderately damaged.

A short time earlier, icy streets caused a two-car collision at the intersection of Brown and Campbell streets resulting in minor damages to both vehicles.

Police officers cited Robert R. Bennett, 19, 1268 Ohio 38-NE, after he turned north onto Brown Street, slid left of center and struck an oncoming vehicle. The other car was driven by Oscar S. Miteff, 56, of 185 Hickory Lane. Neither driver was injured in the 11:45 a.m. collision.

Fayette County sheriff's deputies reported two traffic accidents due to ice and snow-covered roads occurred Wednesday.

John C. Dillon, 28, of 429 Lewis St., reportedly skidded into a pick-up truck parked in Warner's Union 76 service station lot about 12:02 p.m. Sheriff's deputies said he was attempting to pull up to the fuel pumps when the vehicle went into a skid.

The parked truck belonged to Ralph Warner, 800 McLean St. Dillon was uninjured. Damage to both vehicles was slight.

A local resident, Gary A. Frye, 23, of 790 Leslie Trace Court, escaped injury when his car ran off the left side of Cook-Yankeetown Road just east of U.S. 62 and skidded broadside into a road sign, sheriff's deputies reported. The crash occurred around 10:30 p.m. Damages to the car were minor.

Author says Graham should shun politics

NEW YORK (AP) — A Presbyterian minister who has written a book about the Rev. Billy Graham says he believes the evangelist should avoid politicians.

"I feel that he should stay at arm's length from world political figures," David Poling, an Albuquerque, N.M., minister, said Wednesday.

Poling criticized Graham's involvement with several presidents, including former President Richard M. Nixon. He also suggested that Graham should avoid prayer breakfasts in the future.

Poling, a former president of the Christian herald, writes for the Newspaper Enterprise Association. His book is entitled "Why Billy Graham?"

Jaycees slate paper campaign

The Washington C.H. Jaycee chapter will be holding its weekly paper drive from 10 a.m. to 12 noon Saturday at the Seaway parking lot on Clinton Avenue. Anyone having newspapers, catalogs, and magazines are urged to bring them to the collection site where the Jaycees will be on hand to unload cars.

The Jaycee red paper shed is located at the east end of the Seaway parking lot where paper may be dropped off at the convenience of Jaycee paper savers. The shed is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Serving as chairman of the paper drive committee is Leroy Farris.
